Campus Women Are Typical Aggies

By LAURA BLUNK
 Aggies are noted for their middle-of-the-road attitudes and their rather passive responses to attempts at change. Apparently, Aggie coeds are no different from their male counterparts.

This is the conclusion of a survey taken of coeds by head resident advisors of Krueger-Dunn and graduate students Betsy Price and Mary Ann Gleucke.

The survey, done for Educational Psychology 669, entitled The College Student, required that some aspect of undergraduate life be observed and presented to the class for criticism. The topic selected was Women's Attitudes About A&M and a Woman's Role in the World at Large.

A one-page questionnaire was placed in all the dorm mail boxes and either occupant could answer the ten questions. Frequently both girls responded and they were often at opposite ends of the scale.

While the population was primarily freshmen, differences in attitudes and values were consistent with major course of study, mother's occupation and the girl's classification.

Out of the 45 per cent that responded to the questionnaire, 82 per cent were very middle of the road or undecided about their roles, depending on the way one looks at the issues.

Women in the colleges of Science and Engineering were definitely more Women's Lib than their sisters in the other colleges. The College of Liberal Arts was closely divided between the liberals and those who are unsure of their position.

Coeds from towns between 100,000 to 500,000 were the most liberal. When a girl's mother was a career woman, the daughter tended to be a straight-down-the-line Women's Liberationist.

While this would seem to contradict the leading statements made earlier, there are about 3 per cent of the feminine populace who are undecided.

Less than 25 per cent of the coed population is strongly Women's Lib, leaving the rest of the girls with a more even-tempered outlook. The two-percenters bought the apple pie and motherhood myth in its entirety. One wonders how two women of such diverse natures can live together, but they do.

While these are only rough estimates of the final results, there were some very interesting tendencies noted among women with respect to their classification.

Freshmen had the greatest diversity of opinion, while the upperclassmen had a more homogeneous range of thought, tending to be more liberal.

While this is basically a function of the population sample itself, it may also mean that many of the enrolled freshmen do not stay in school.

Sophomores were interested in getting ahead in their field for what the job would do for them personally, rather than how much they could improve the state of the world.

Juniors wanted to graduate and travel. On the whole, seniors didn't bother to turn in their questionnaires.

Price and Gleucke concluded the latter group was too busy trying to graduate to do anything else.

The Student "Y" Association will sponsor the annual Thanksgiving Service again this year. The service will be held in the All Faiths Chapel Nov. 20 at 7:30 p. m. Pastor of the Shiloh Terrace Baptist Church in Dallas, Frank Poland, will present the service. Assisting in the service are the Student Chaplains. The New Tradition Singers will perform under the direction of Robert L. Boone. The service is open to the entire community. Two services will be held Sunday morning, Nov. 19. The Student Chaplains will lead a separate service in both the stacking and cutting areas for those working on Bonfire Today, team captains will be contacting team members giving last minute instructions for working with Bonfire. Coeds will begin working on the coffee truck and handing out sandwiches Nov. 17 in the stacking area and on Sunday will begin working in the cutting area There will be a meeting 9 p. m. Thursday for all girls working on Bonfire. The meeting will be held in the downstairs part of the Commons not used as the cafeteria. This will be the last meeting before activities begin and will be a question and answer session. Residents of Krueger have set up schedules for working at security posts, but this is open to anyone wanting to participate. Students need not sign up, just come and go as your schedule permits "Winter Wonderland" will be the theme for the first formal Christmas Ball to be held for Krueger-Dunn residents and dates Dec. 2, 9 p. m. - 1 a. m. An eight-piece band, Reunion, will provide music. They are from Austin and pattern themselves after Chicago. The Commons area will be decorated to represent a winter scene with snow and a flocked Christmas tree trimmed with blue lights. Refreshments will be provided and there is no charge for residents who have paid dorm activity fee The A&M Girls Rodeo Team will participate in a rodeo with Sam Houston State in Huntsville November 16

Ma Adams Retires

Mrs. Mildred L. (Ma) Adams, who kept track of freshmen and sophomore ROTC cadets' grades and worked in the Commandant's Office, retired Friday at A&M.

Friends in the Military Science and Aerospace Studies Departments joined to wish her well.

Mrs. Adams has been a military personnel clerk and typist in the Military Science Department basic section since September 1966.

She received a 20-year pin from the civil service among several presentations.
