WASHINGTON — A complaint from a 12-year-old schoolboy about a four-cent price increase on paint for his model airplanes resulted Tuesday in a $150,000 suit by the Justice Department against a hobby products manufacturer.

Filing of the action against Testor Corp. of Rockford, Ill., in U.S. District Court in Chicago was announced by the Cost of Living Council.

SAIGON — A mistaken U.S. bombing just south of Da Nang took a heavy toll of Vietnamese civilian casualties Tuesday and wrecked a hamlet, the U.S. Command reported.

The Saigon command said the casualty toll rose to 21 civilians killed. More than a score of civilians were wounded. The U.S. Command said 29, the Saigon command 23.

WASHINGTON — Canada will hold up its decision on joining a Vietnam cease-fire supervisory commission until it learns the results of an international conference that won't convene for 30 days after the fighting stops, a diplomatic source said Tuesday.

The Canadian position could put a crimp in U.S. planning since presidential adviser Henry A. Kissinger wants a supervisory apparatus in place when a cease-fire goes into effect.

CINCINNATI, Ohio — In an unprecedented move, the American Medical Association voted Tuesday to take strong action against a "significant problem" of narcotic-dependence, alcoholism and psychiatric disorders among America's practicing physicians.

The recommendations approved Tuesday could ultimately lead to loss of licenses to practice by such doctors. But the AMA stressed that any disciplinary or other action would be in the "compassionate" interest of the doctors themselves, as well as protecting the public and the "reputation of the medical profession" as a whole.

WASHINGTON — Mexican Army Gen. Humberto Mariles Cortes and six others have been arrested in France in connection with the seizure of 132 pounds of heroin, the Bureau of Narcotics and Dangerous Drugs announced Tuesday.

The heroin, with a street value of $26 million, was found in three suitcases in a rented parked car outside the apartment of Rachid Gharbi of Paris, one of four Frenchmen arrested, BNDD director John Ingersoll said.

LONDON — Muhammad Ali has a handsome trophy waiting for him when he next visits Britain—a mounted silver plaque engraved with his portrait and a dove of peace under his name.

It was commissioned by the Muhammad Ali Fan Club, which sprang into action when Ali was stripped of his world heavyweight title in 1968.

Hitler Deputy Said To Be Alive In S. America

LONDON (AP)—Hitler deputy Martin Bormann posed as a Roman Catholic priest in Bolivia during the late 1950s before using millions in smuggled Nazi loot to build a vast business empire, the Daily Express said Wednesday.

The article is one of a copyrighted series that claims Bormann, Hitler's right-hand man during World War II, escaped Berlin after Hitler's death and paid Argentina dictator Juan D. Peron $200 million for refuge. Bormann would now be 72.

The series was written by American spy expert Ladislav Farago in collaboration with Stewart Steven, formerly the newspaper's foreign editor. It is distributed in the United States by the Chicago Tribune-New York Daily News syndicate.

Farago said Bormann left Argentina for Brazil when Peron was ousted from power in 1955, and later went to Bolivia. He dropped the identity of Eliezer Goldstein, under which he had entered Argentina, the article added, and picked the name Augustin von der Lange Lerrbach—adapted from a character in a ribald Goethe play.

Wednesday's installment reported that while in Bolivia Bormann participated in Catholic services, including weddings, baptisms and funerals.

It said he left Bolivia after the 1960 capture of Adolf Eichmann and went by way of Peru to Chile, where he bought a farm close to the Argentine border.

At that point, the article said, Bormann began to build his business empire based on funds and treasure smuggled out of Germany in the last stages of the war. His interests, the paper said, include a monopoly of the timber market in northern Argentina and southern Paraguay.

Resonance by Steve Grayson

The Beachboys started out as a family act in 1961. Dennis, Brian and Carl Wilson, their cousin Mike Love and neighbor Al Jardine, managed by Mr. Wilson.

Brian had three nervous breakdowns between '63 and '66. Studio guitarist Glen Campbell took his place in live performances. In 1965 they all studied at the Maharishi's place in India. In 1967 a quiet young man who had 16 wives and an intense stare moved in with Dennis Wilson. His name was Charles Manson and he stayed for seven months.

By 1970 they weren't the same Beachboys that had sung about the California girls with long blonde hair. Nearly 10 years had gone by and their music showed it.

Their latest album is a double record deal, "So Tough" and a re-release of "Pet Sounds." That's right, the same "Pet Sounds" of 1966. Those two together in one cover make the best buy anywhere, and the top album of the 70s.

Now that the influence of the old Beachboy music is a little dim, "Pet Sounds" is easier to accept on its own merits. It should be, since the amount of music crammed in it is unbelievable. It has been for six years, of course, only now the impact of non-Beachboy music by the Beachboys is gone. "Pet Sounds" is nice; nice thoughts, nice harmonies, nice sounds. Both sides slide by effortlessly. Their version of "Sloop John B." is included as are Beachboy originals "Caroline No" and "God Only Knows," along with 11 others. "Wouldn't It Be Nice" is perfect, the feeling it has in it couldn't be done better.

From 1966 to 1972 is what the change to "So Tough" represents. The harmonies are a little lower, though just as clear. The instrumentation is more complicated but still, characteristically, only backs up the vocals.

"Marcella" is the only track released as a single but every other song on "So Tough" is just as good. "All This Is That" is so tough they should have named the album after it. Can you think of a song where five different voices are distinguishable, all singing the same word at the same time? "He Came Down" has it, a masterful production job.

In one package, "So Tough" and "Pet Sounds" are unbeatable. If you're not a Beachboy fan, good, since the ones we remember just aren't. Their music shows it, and it's a change for the better.
