

Practicing Engineers To Evaluate 692 Design Graphic Students freshman engineering students in the design graphics program are reporting that the problem solutions to a number of practicing engineers are being evaluated. The freshmen are enrolled in the Design Graphics program, which is a first-semester course. The design graphics program is a new program at Texas A&M University, and it is designed to provide students with the skills and knowledge necessary to design and produce technical drawings. The program is a joint effort between the School of Engineering and the Department of Industrial Design. 105, a first semester course structured to introduce students to design, problem solving, engineering applications and communications. Dr. James H. Earle, department head, noted the "Visiting Engineers Program" was started in 1966. The engineers first visit class teams during the sixth week of class, and return the 15th week to review team presentations and solutions. Each engineer spends one day meeting with the student teams. Visiting engineers this fall include Lloyd J. Wolf, executive vice president, Southwest Wheel and Manufacturing Co., Dallas; Louis E. Biar, process engineering supervisor, B. F. Goodrich Chemical Co., Port Neches; James B. Jennings, general superintendent, Lone Star Steel Co., Lone Star; Thomas D. Conger, chief, facilities, program office, NASA Manned Spacecraft Center, Houston; E. W. Bod-deker, acting head, master planning section NASA MSC Houston, and Marvin L. Luther, mechanical engineer, Alcoa, Point Comfort. Also, Bennett Coulson, president, Coulson and Associates Engineers, Inc., Houston; Suerre Wolf, supervisor, electronics group, Hycel, Inc., Houston; Charles V. Rice, engineering project supervisor, American Oil Co., Texas City; Robert W. McGaw, senior project engineer, Lone Star Steel Co., Lone Star; Justin E. Weatherly Jr., owner, Weatherly Engineering, Victoria; and Gary L. Slusher, petroleum engineer, Mobil Oil Corp., Corpus Christi. Others are Spencer P. Buckner, chief engineer, Mission Manufacturing Co., Houston; Dalton E. Hamilton, vice president, Trinity Engineering Testing Corp., Waco; Oswald H. White, project manager, Bechtel Corp., Houston; Darnell R. Knippa, petroleum engineer, Mobil Oil Corp., Houston; Grover C. Williams, vice president, Trinity Engineering Testing Corp., Waco; Harvey J. Chelf, chief structural engineer, Bechtel Corp., Houston; Leslie G. Calder, Gulf States Utilities Co., Beaumont; Anthony J. Masciopinto, supervisor, mechanical engineering group, Hycel, Inc., Houston, and a representative from TRW Systems, Houston.
