

"THERE ARE A FEW MORE dials on the instrument panel than there are on your electric range, but it doesn't take long to figure them out," Dr. Cornwell said. (Photo by Steve Ueckert)

GETTING INTO THE American Trainer is almost as difficult as learning to use the instrument panel.

Flying Club Has Much To Offer

By JAN LANDERS
Women's Editor

Pre-flight, mixture-rich, throttle-close, master on, ignition on, clear prop and start engine were foreign terms to this writer until Dr. Cornwell of the A&M Flying Club gave me a ride in the American Trainer.

"The flying club was organized for the students, faculty and staff of A&M who wanted to obtain their private license," Dr. Cornwell of the Mechanical Engineering Department explained.

The newly reorganized A&M Flying Club is incorporated under the laws of Texas and recognized by the university although it receives no school funds.

"We have a board of directors who are faculty members. They oversee the operations of the club and act as advisers in financial matters," Dr. Cornwell said.

"This is a student operated organization and all the officers are students. Students, faculty and staff can join the club," Dr. Cornwell continued.

Members receive training to be tested for a private and commercial license and instrument rating. Members attend ground school to learn the basics of flying, knowledge of which is essential to pass the FAA test.

The club leases two planes from Phoenix Aircraft Leasing Inc. The American Trainer, a low, mono-wing, two-seater, is used for flight lessons. The club also uses a Cessna 172. Every 100 hours the planes are given an extensive instrument check to maintain the maximum operation level. In addition, the club has access to airplanes for cross-country flying.

A&M Flying Club has five flight instructors available to club members. The chief flying instructor is Dr. Donald Wesell of the Animal Science Department.

Dr. Cornwell estimates the cost of obtaining a private license to run from $500 to $550. The breakdown on cost is $35 for initiation fee, $4 monthly dues, $10 an hour for the plane, plus instructors fees.

The FAA requires a minimum of 40 hours flying time before a student pilot can take its examination.

"Generally it takes from three to six months to get in the proper number of hours and feel confident enough to take the FAA test," Dr. Cornwell said.

"At our monthly club meeting, which is held the first Thursday of every month, we plan to have guest speakers from the FAA, films on aviation safety, and safety clinics. We will also have joint meetings with the Civil Air Patrol," Dr. Cornwell said.

The next meeting of the Flying Club will be Feb. 1 at 8 p.m. in the Chemistry Building, Room 229. For further information contact Steve Betton at 846-4763.

After spending an afternoon "busting clouds" in the zippy burnt-orange American Trainer this writer can understand the motivation people have in seeking a private flying license. It was a very free and nonconfining experience and, for a few moments, the cares of a college campus can be forgotten.

DES appears to be remarkably effective in preventing pregnancies, the panel was told, but many questions about its safety remain unanswered.

Dr. M. B. Lipsett, a researcher at the Medical Institute of Child and Human Development, said there is no known threshold dose below which an estrogen will not cause cancer. But he said the incidence decreases in likelihood as the dosage and frequency drops.

The committee held a final meeting Friday to ponder the problem and opened its morning session to hear testimony from a number of scientists and researchers.

Morning-After Pill May Cause Cancer

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Food and Drug Administration is keeping secret an advisory panel's recommendation on controversial morning-after birth control pills which are gaining popularity among college girls despite concern that they may cause cancer.

"Premature disclosure of the recommendations would harm rather than aid good consumer protection," said Dr. J. Richard Crout, director of the FDA's Office of Scientific Evaluation.

The agency hopes to reach a final conclusion within the next few weeks and the panel's advice will be released at that time, an FDA spokesman said.

Sources close to the year-long investigation said the Obstetrics and Gynecology Advisory Committee has advised the FDA to recognize and approve postcoital use of the drug, but with new labels warning doctors not to prescribe it for high-risk patients.

Among the synthetic estrogens known to interfere with pregnancy after sexual intercourse, the most widely prescribed because of its relatively low cost is diethylstilbestrol—DES—recently banned from cattle feed and linked to a dramatic increase in rare genital cancer in young women.

The committee held a final meeting Friday to ponder the problem and opened its morning session to hear testimony from a number of scientists and researchers.

DR. CORNWELL EXPLAINS the principles of flying to a baffled and apprehensive novice.

Athletic Opportunities Available To A&M Coeds

Opportunities for coeds in the Physical Education Department are many and varied.

In addition to courses including figure control and modern dance, the department offers such activities as badminton, gymnastics and swimming in intercollegiate competition.

Upcoming events include a district badminton tournament, Feb. 9-10, a gymnastics state meet, March 9-10, and a women's swimming invitational, Feb. 3.

For additional information contact Kay Don, Room 220, G. Rollie White Coliseum.

Omega Phi Alpha Holds Open Rush

An A&M girls' service organization, Delta Delta Chapter of Omega Phi Alpha, will hold an open rush Wednesday for new spring semester members.

Chapter President Martha Burgoon of Ore City said all interested girls are welcome to the 7 p.m. event in Room 226 of the University Library.

OPA conducts a variety of projects to help organizations. Among spring semester projects are participation in the College Station Cleanup, the Aggie Blood Drive, Cancer and Heart Fund drives, March of Dimes and Bryan Day Care Center.

Social and self-improvement events are also frequent, including cooperative socials with Alpha Phi Omega, men's service fraternity. Burgoon emphasized that all TAMU women students may attend the open rush and inquire about membership.
