CWENS To Pick Members

TAMU's chapter of Alpha Zeta CWENS is sponsoring a tea for 350 prospective freshman women eligible for 1973-74 membership tonight in the MSC Social Room.

The tea is for CWENS members to meet and interview women interested in joining CWENS, a sophomore honor and service society, and to designate 50 women for active membership.

Any coed freshman with a 3.0 GPR will be eligible. Members will be selected on scholarship, leadership qualities, extracurricular activities and willingness to be an active member in the society. CWENS is based on old Anglo-

Saxon traditions with rituals and ceremonies stressing friendship among women at TAMU and service to the university.

There is much discussion in universities today about the worth of honor and service societies. Many believe them useless as incentives and harmful as organizations because societies attract only bers when extra help was needed

CWENS is organized to present more to the other students than a superficial appeal.

"At TAMU, CWENS hope to tap into membership only those girls who have shown interest and made progress in school activities, high school and college, and who care about ideas and friendship," Patty Whatley, CWENS president, said.

"In CWENS, these values are stressed, not only in the selection of members, but also in the program of activities.

This year, CWENS has served as a backup for many MSC Committees in need of hostesses and help during mail-outs. Visiting guests are given tours of the campus. CWENS began a "Callan-Aid" program where the University Hospital could call mem-
