Group Blocked From Testing POWs

WASHINGTON (AP) — The American Psychological Association (APA) said Tuesday one of its boards has been blocked by the Pentagon in efforts "to find out the kinds of psychological treatment being received by returning prisoners of war."

"To date," said the APA in a statement, "they (members of the board) have been stymied in their efforts to obtain any information which would put to rest the fears of psychological manipulation or psychological mistreatment." And the organization quoted a member of the investigating board, Dr. Hubert Kelman, as saying "there can be little doubt that the POWs are being used for the political manipulation of the American public" by the Nixon administration.

The APA released excerpts of an editorial, written by Kelman, and planned for publication in the APA's official newspaper, the APA Monitor.

Kelman, a member of APA's

Board of Social and Ethical Responsibility for Psychology, says in part:

"It is clear that the public context for the homecoming of the POWs is primarily based on political and public-relations considerations.

"The POWs have been assigned the role of heroes in a war that has no heroes — the central role in an elaborate drama staged to provide justification of the President's policy, to create the illusion of victory, and to arouse a sense of patriotic fervor. "There can be little doubt that the POWs are being used for the political manipulation of the American public. Whether this use is likely to be directly detrimental to their psychological well-being is a matter of judgment and speculation."

He adds:

"From all indications, the public context of the homecoming deviated from the procedures recommended by psychologists working on Operation Homecoming and adopted by the Prisoner of War-Missing in Action Task Force in the Department of Defense itself, which envisaged a quiet, private homecoming, without fanfare and crowds, in order to insure that the returnees would not be psychologically overwhelmed.

"It seems the procedures that the psychological consultants and the Task Force considered to be in the best interests of men were overruled by the political and public-relations objectives of higher political military authorities."

The APA, in releasing the excerpts, said:

"The hesitancy of the Department of Defense to reveal tactical and psychological care procedures for the POWs prompted the board to continue in its investigation."

House Sustains Nixon Veto

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House Tuesday sustained President Nixon's veto of a $120 million rural water and sewer grant bill that would have forced him to spend money appropriated by Congress.

It was the first test in the House this year of Nixon's veto power in the clash over the setting of national spending priorities.

The House mustered a 225-189 vote that fell 51 short of the two-thirds majority needed to override.

Voting to override Nixon's veto were 200 Democrats and 25 Republicans, while 161 Republicans were joined by 28 Democrats backing the President.

Nixon thus registered his second veto victory in a week. His veto of a bill authorizing a $2.6 billion program for rehabilitating the handicapped was sustained in the Senate last week and therefore never reached the House.

It takes overriding votes of both chambers of Congress to write a bill into law over the President's objections.

"We are face to face with a confrontation that has been in the making for some time," Speaker Carl Albert, D-Okla., told the House. "We are dealing, in a sense, with the basic constitutional system of this nation. We are dealing with the authority of the Congress of the United States to make the laws of the land."

Albert said there are many poor communities that "cannot possibly pay for the construction of water and sewage plants."

But the House Republican Policy Committee, headed by Rep. John J. Rhodes, R-Ariz., said the action by the House would test Nixon's "policy of controlling government spending by eliminating overlapping government services, a policy designed to save all Americans from the twin scourges of inflation and higher taxes."

In January, Nixon killed the rural program as part of what he termed his effort to hold down taxes and combat inflation. The House had voted 297-54 last month to require the President to spend an estimated $120 million in the year ending June 30 and up to $330 million annually in the coming years.

Nixon vetoed that bill last Thursday.

The bill would have provided water and waste-disposal project grants to communities with less than 10,000 persons.

Prof Named Vice Chairman Of Oil Research Committee

Dr. Paul B. Crawford, A&M professor of petroleum engineering, has been named vice chairman of the research committee of the Interstate Oil Compact Commission, a league of governors of some 30 oil producing states.

Dr. Crawford, who has served as chairman for the past six years of the long-range research planning committee of the compact, has written one segment of a book soon to be released by the compact which explains new techniques of increased oil recovery from lone reservoirs.

A program of the compact, due to be initiated in June, will contain papers on deep sedimentary basins likely to contain oil and gas, and how to drill for oil to 30,000 feet. Geology of lightly to unexplored states for oil also will be covered in the future program.

"We are in the process of compiling a book describing several different methods of increasing the oil recovery from presently-known oil reservoirs," Dr. Crawford said. "These methods include fluid displacement, recovery by fire flooding and steam injection."

He said methods outlined in the book have the potential of almost doubling the recovery of oil in which the new methods have application.

Dr. Crawford, who prepared the section of the book covering fire flooding, said oil production today normally leaves five times as much oil underground as is being produced because of economic considerations.
