Quake Rocks Hawaiian Isles, Marks 6.0 On Richter Scale

HONOLULU (AP) — An earthquake registering 6.0 on the Richter scale struck a short distance off the coast of Hawaii Island Thursday, shaking most of the state of Hawaii.

In Hilo, the largest city on Hawaii Island with a population of 26,000, a frame building collapsed, pinning a man inside briefly. The man was hospitalized with a broken leg, authorities said.

Several radio stations on Hawaii Island were knocked off the air, and the island's mayor, Shunichi Kimura, declared a state of emergency.

There were no other reports of major damage or injuries, but there were scattered reports of minor damage.

Many office buildings in downtown Honolulu were evacuated immediately after the quake, but workers returned to their offices when police gave the all-clear sign a half hour later.

The tremor was first felt at 10:29 a.m. and was followed by a stronger jolt.
