

Alcohol Board Votes Against Grass Penalty

Supporters of Texas Alcohol Narcotics Education (TANE) are overwhelmingly opposed to lowering the penalty for possession of marijuana, according to results of a survey sent to some 80,000 subscribers to the Christian Crusader, official TANE publication.

The 3,650 (4.6% of those surveyed) replying also favored mandatory jail sentence for first offense of driving while intoxicated, favored a dram shop law which would make the seller of alcoholic beverages responsible if he sells to a drunk who in turn causes damage to life or property, favored making it illegal to carry an open liquor container in a car, favored a law requiring a liquor licensee to report all crimes committed on his premises, and opposed legalizing pari-mutuel horse race gambling.

TANE is a church-supported non-profit organization, active since 1935 opposing increased drinking and drug abuse. Over the years the organization's emphasis has shifted from political action to production of books, filmstrips, and other alcohol and drug abuse educational aids. However, a legislative information service is still maintained. TANE's programs include a 202-man speakers bureau, a free film lending library for churches and schools, and alcohol and drug information for students and teachers. TANE's educational materials are used in schools in all 50 states and 14 foreign countries.

Results of the survey were: 1. Lowering the penalty for possession of marijuana: For, 545; Against, 2,960; No opinion, 149. 2. Mandatory jail sentence for first DWI offense: For, 2,929; Against, 534; No opinion, 184. 3. Require a liquor licensee to report all crimes committed on his premises: For, 3,395; Against, 137; No opinion, 121. 4. A Dram Shop Law which would make the seller of alcoholic beverages responsible if he sells to a drunk who in turn causes damage to life or property: For, 3,165; Against, 288; No opinion, 194. 5. Make it illegal to carry an open liquor container in a car: For, 3,278; Against, 289; No opinion, 80. 6. Legalize pari-mutuel horse race gambling: For, 128; Against, 3,478; No opinion, 41.

More Facilities On The Way For Disabled

Special facilities and services are provided handicapped students of Texas A&M University, with more coming.

Fall and summer class schedules acquaint physically disabled students with registration assistance, Dean of Admissions and Records Edwin H. Cooper noted.

Elevators, ramps and handrails are being installed or planned for existing campus buildings that lack easy access for handicapped students.

Low-angle ramps will be in use at the Academic Building, YMCA, University Library and Chemistry Buildings before fall classes begin, according to Howard Perry. The associate dean of students served on a committee that studied and recommended renovations.

Among the modifications will be an elevator in Bolton Hall.

All new construction on the TAMU campus provides for handicapped persons use, in accordance with federal legislation. Among buildings designed to include features for the handicapped are the Zachry Engineering Center, Memorial Student Center addition and eight-story office-classroom building.

Handicapped students needing registration assistance will be helped by members of the TAMU chapter of Alpha Phi Omega, national service fraternity.

Registration headquarters in the Cushing Building has been furnished a list of APO members who will contact a student who requests assistance.

Any handicapped student can initiate help by phoning 845-7117. The office of Donald D. Carter will notify an APO member who will contact the student to determine how, when and where assistance can be given.

"All efforts will be coordinated through Mr. Carter's office so that the registration process will cause as little inconvenience as possible for the disabled student," explained Registrar Robert A. Lacey.

At least one handicapped student used the service during preregistration, noted Carter. He said TAMU currently enrolls about 50 disabled students.
