"THE WHOLE DUTY OF MAN"

The writer of the book of Ecclesiastes calls himself "The Preacher." It is a powerful sermon that he presents. He poses the fundamental question as to what it is good for a man to do with his life (2:3). And he deals with the possible answers to this question, answers which many men mistakenly accept.

The Preacher tells of his search for happiness in wisdom and knowledge, but found this to be "a striving after wind" (1:17). He relates his effort to find fulfillment in pleasure and mirth, but "this also was vanity" (2:1). He details his quest for satisfaction in possessions and accomplishments, but this course forced him to conclude that "all was vanity and a striving after wind, and there was no profit under the sun" (2:11). Neither philosophy, hedonism, nor materialism bring the basic answers man needs for life, nor satisfaction for the soul.

Sundry observations on life are made by the Preacher. Without God and doing the will of God man finds life monotonous, aimless, hopeless, meaningless, and futile. He has only uncertainty about life and its most important considerations, and continues dread of death.

In the final chapter, the Preacher gives the solution to all these problems: serve God from youth to death. "This is the end of the matter; all hath been heard: Fear God, and keep his commandments; for this is the whole duty of man. For God will bring every work into judgement, with every hidden thing, whether it be good, or whether it be evil" (Ecc. 12:13, 14). The man who does this will find fulfillment in life, comfort in death, and blessedness in eternity. The man who spends his life otherwise will finally be forced to acknowledge: "Vanity of vanities, saith the Preacher: vanity of vanities, all is vanity" (1:2). As another has said, the soul of man was made for God, and finds rest only in God.

BAPTIST STUDENT CENTER

Opera And Performing Arts Society Has Outstanding Lineup Of Activities

Excitement and pageantry of opera and internationally famous artists have burst on the Brazos Valley.

It is generated by the Opera and Performing Arts Society, OPAS' lineup of proven talent for its debut season and the opening of the glittering new theater complex of A&M's University Center this fall.

The society, formed by people who want to see outstanding performers and chaired by Walter H. Parsons Jr., has announced its 1973-74 program.

Individuals backing OPAS through contributions and guarantees agree the program is a credit to any major city of the world.

The OPAS season and 2,500-seat University Center auditorium will open Dec. 5 with Violinist Itzhak Perlman, "one of the commanding talents of our time... a giant in the making."

America's great artist Van Cliburn will perform Jan. 17; the National Ballet of Washington, Jan. 31, and the Houston Symphony directed by Lawrence Foster, April 25.

OPAS' first season will climax Feb. 27 with presentation of "The Marriage of Figaro." The opera will feature Norman Treigle, almost a legend in his own time; the exciting soprano Carol Neblett and Eileen Shelle.

Marisa Galvany, a young soprano whose "Aida" in Mexico City last August was hailed a "veritable phenomenon," will appear in concert April 9.

OPAS special attractions will include "America's first important classical guitarist," Christopher Parkening on Nov. 5 and the Houston Lyric Art Quartet with Pianist Albert Hirsh, March 28.

The Parkening concert may be in the Memorial Student Center Ballroom, depending on readiness of the main theater.

OPAS' debut season is described in a brochure that should become a collector's item. Dr. Barbara Coe, OPAS vice president for promotion and public relations, assembled the publication that contains performance and artist sketches, a description of the theater complex and ticket information.

"The Marriage of Figaro" will be performed in cooperation with the San Antonio Symphony and Opera Society and the Corbett Foundation of Cincinnati.

Artist photos and the theater setting appear alongside copies on historical works depicting early performers, from the Coe's collection.

Society officers and directors are listed, along with contributors and guarantors. Founded last fall through Texas A&M's Town Hall Committee, OPAS is supported by the Arts Council of the Brazos Valley.

The program was arranged through their support, to begin an era of cultural presentations and set the scene for TAMU's centennial in 1975-76. More than 500 people in the eight-county area, including numerous Texas A&M students, helped finance the program, with the goal of placing the performances within reach of all interested citizens.

Claimed by critics, it was called "a dancing gold mine" and led Clive Barnes of the New York Times to say, "The National Ballet is a national treasure."

Treigle, in the major role, is one of the most celebrated singing-actors of the present day. He is the leading bass-baritone of the New York City Opera, has appeared with every major U. S. opera company and in opera capitals around the world. The blend of his exceptional voice and acting ability has made Treigle widely sought by movie producers.

The National Ballet of Washington performed the full-length "The Sleeping Beauty" in observance of the inaugural season of the John F. Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts.

Lawrence Foster's brilliance, at 29 years of age, is attested by his being retained as chief guest conductor of the Royal Philharmonic of London while directing the Houston Symphony. Beethoven's Triple Concerto will highlight the spring concert. Soloists appearing with the symphony are Ronald Patterson, violinist; Shirley Trepel, cellist, and Albert Hirsh, pianist who will also perform with the Houston Lyric Art Quartet.

Miss Galvany will open the New Orleans opera season this year in "La Guivre" opposite Richard Tucker. Her performance in Mexico last year left opera goers comparing her with the great Maria Callas. "Aida" had to be stopped several minutes to allow an outburst of approval to subside.

No less a master than Andres Segovia said Christopher Parkening is "a great artist, one of the most brilliant guitarists in the world."

The OPAS executive committee consists of Parsons; 12 vice presidents; treasurer Dr. Ted Coe; executive director Wayne Stark; assistant executive director for legal matters, Mrs. Johannes van Overbeek, and OPAS Guild president, Mrs. Robert Wiatt.

The Church..For a Fuller Life..For You..

HOB SMALL, YET

HOW BIG

How small a man seems — walking down a lonely road on a rainy day, with gaunt trees towering over him.

How small man is, and how frail in body, the trees in the picture and even the chimneys on the old house will probably long outlive the man.

Yet how big man is — in the things that are not of the body, but are of the mind and soul. God has not made man mammoth. But He has made him potentially great — if he will but accept the blessings given him, and use the tools of Christian teachings.

Man finds in the Church, the encouragement and the instruction to enable him to make from his God-given divine spark something great and enduring — and of benefit to all human-kind.
