

Shredded Money Poses Problem

What can you do with a barrel of money?

That's the problem confronting a select group of graduate students enrolled in a new entrepreneurial science program offered by the College of Business Administration.

Their problem would be reduced considerably if the currency were in the form of crisp dollar bills. This particular supply, however, has been run through the highly efficient shredder of the Federal Reserve Bank.

The feds are willing to part with these devalued dollars for $10 a ton, provided the purchaser doesn't appear to be a "quick buck" artist.

Dr. John E. Pearson, A&M's business dean, passed the test and was allocated a half bale which he promptly placed in a special room called the "storm barn." No one is allowed in the storm barn except the entrepreneurial science students. They go there "to brainstorm ideas."

If they can't get inspired by the barrel of money, there are other items around to challenge their ingenuity. For example, hanging from the ceiling is a set of "Clackers," serving as a constant reminder that 47 tons of the once-popular toy are available almost for the asking.

The idea is to find a profitable use for what is normally regarded as useless. In the case of the shredded money, Dean Pearson became interested after learning the predominate utilization to date has been adding it to drilling mud in oil explorations.

Creativity is the key word in describing the business program, believed to be the only one of its kind in the nation.

"The best we can hope for is to bring creativity out in our students," Dean Pearson observed. "You can't teach it."

"We are not simply teaching students how to make a quick buck," he added. "Through this program we hope to develop a new type of business leader who can work in a creative but deliberate way to bring new resources and technologies together for business enterprising while protecting and rehabilitating the total business environment."

He said this new thrust in graduate business education requires breaking from traditional descriptive courses of business operations and moving toward courses emphasizing the ability to engage in multi-faceted, analytical planning. Students selected for the program are just as likely to have had basic formal education in science or engineering as in business administration.

In addition to finding new uses for seemingly useless materials, the students also are challenged to create new products or services.

Thus confronted, an earlier group of graduate students explored the design and marketing possibilities for a more effective maternity girdle — an endeavor dubbed the "Prenatal Cradle Company." The project has advanced to the toddler stage.

Auto Insurance Rates Predicted To Drop Again

AUSTIN—Annual public hearings to determine auto insurance rates were held here this week amid predictions that premiums will drop again this year.

Insurance Board Chairman Joe Christie expressed hope that evidence will bring a reduction for insurance buyers in most of Texas' 40 statistical rating territories.

Joggers Run Saturday

Joggers and runners will beat the heat Friday.

They will also get an hour head-start on the day through a "Summer Jog" at A&M.

Dr. John Chevrette of the Health and Physical Education Department said the "Summer Jog" will consist of three and five-mile runs. It begins at 7 a.m. at G. Rollie White Coliseum. Anyone can participate.

Chevrette stressed that the events are non-competitive. The jog will be at the individual's own pace. Students, faculty-staff and friends of A&M plan to take part.

A social for participants will be held Friday evening at Chevrette's home in Harvey.

Hill Files Suits To Recover Gas Market Value

Atty. Gen. John Hill has filed 14 more suits to recover full market value of royalty gas produced from state lands. The first such suit was filed May 18 against Exxon Corporation.

The state contends it is not limited by long term contracts, nor to any regulated ceiling prices promulgated by the Federal Power Commission.

Defendants, according to state allegations, are selling gas at about 20 cents per 1,000 cubic feet, or less, while the market value is around 45 cents per 1,000 cubic feet.

Suits now filed cover about 80 per cent of all lease contracts involving gas royalties, Hill said.

This year's hearing was conducted against a backdrop of new legislation and a price freeze which applies to insurance as well as the usual review of accident frequency, claim cost and inflationary factors.

Laws which must be considered are comparative negligence, repeal of the guest statute, personal injury protection and the new deviation or competitive rating plan.

Texas Safety Association will also ask additional credit for persons completing the defensive driving course. Board rules now allow a 10 per cent reduction in auto insurance rates for those certified as having taken the course.

Meanwhile, House Insurance Committee Chairman Rep. Ben Bynum of Amarillo predicted the average premium will drop 10 to 15 per cent when the new rates are set this fall.

Competitive rates may mean drops of as much as 20 to 30 per cent for drivers with good safety records, Bynum said.

"Nobody can definitely state what the final rates will be until the statistics and the impact of new insurance laws are weighed in detail after the hearing," said Christie.

"Serving Texas Aggies"

Any bill shall not be returned by the President within ten days (Sundays excepted) . . . the same shall be a law. (Article I, Section 7 of the Constitution)

They were conscientious and astute men—those architects of the Constitution. They wanted to be sure the President could never halt the processes of democratic government by delaying legislation.

And the phrase "Sundays excepted" shows that our Founding Fathers also respected Sunday as the day of the Lord.

To them, it seemed natural to safeguard their freedom and press their faith all in one sentence.

The document they produced has weathered two hundred years—their faith almost two thousand. Both their Constitution and their creed—the Christian faith—are just as vibrant and important today. Make Sundays an exception to your daily routine—Go to Church!
