

Weekend Programs Describe A&M's Service to State

A&M's service to the state will be highlighted this fall during a series of weekend programs coinciding with home football games. President Jack K. Williams said the series will have an overall theme of "Texas A&M Serves the People" with each weekend having a sub-theme spotlighting one portion of the university's activities.

Sub-themes will be "Keeping the Peace," "Promoting Public Education," "Expanding Health Care," "Leading in Marine Affairs" and "Building a Greater State."

The "Keeping the Peace" program, tying in with the Wichita State game Sept. 15, will center on TAMU's Corps of Cadets with special note of the role of the university in providing officers for the armed services. The new band hall also will be formally named that weekend in honor of Col. E. V. Adams who retired this year after directing the Texas Aggie Band for 27 years.

TAMU's game with Boston College Sept. 29 will be preceded by "Promoting Public Education" activities which include dedication of a new eight-story classroom building used primarily by the Colleges of Education and Liberal Arts.

"Expanding Health Care" coincides with the Baylor game Oct. 27, with attention turned to TAMU's various medically related programs, many of which are conducted in cooperation with Baylor College of Medicine. A special tribute also will be paid that weekend to Wofford Cain of Dallas, a 1913 graduate who has been active in support of the university for more than half a century and has made major contributions for construction of the university's library and athletic dormitory. The dormitory, still under construction, will be named in his honor.

Dedication of TAMU's new 15-story oceanography-meteorology building will climax the "Leading in Marine Affairs" program prior to the SMU game Nov. 10. The ceremonies will include placement of a plaque on the building noting the university's Sea Grant College designation. Technical seminars on oceanographic and meteorological topics also will be conducted.

The series concludes on Thanksgiving Day with a "Building a Greater State" program before the game with the University of Texas. In addition to spotlighting TAMU's various extension and related programs which directly and indirectly benefit citizens throughout the state, activities will include dedication of the university's 12-story conference tower and auditorium complex in honor of the late Gen. Earl Rudder, who served as TAMU president from 1959 until his death in 1970.

Nick Burnham Elected Head Of National Rodeo Association

Nick Burnham, third-year student of Vet Medicine, has been elected student president of the National Intercollegiate Rodeo Association.

The election was held in June during the College National Finals Rodeo at Bozeman, Mont. Don Graham, Dan Gambelin, Lew Rust, Keith Chapman, Terry Chapman and Grady Groves also attended the finals as a team, placing fourth in the nation.

The team competed against rodeo members from 10 other regions in the United States. To place, all members must qualify in all events.

The local division of the NIRA will sponsor an all Aggie Rodeo October 25-27. Those interested in this rodeo can meet Monday at 7:30 p.m. in Room 215 of the Animal Industries Building.

A dance and Jack Pot for club members will be held September 14. The Jack Pot is a local rodeo with two or three standard events. Those who enter will pay a standard fee which will be used as prize money for the top four winners.

The club will host an Intercollegiate Rodeo during the spring semester. This rodeo has been approved by the National Intercollegiate Rodeo Association.

On the national level, the NIRA has 2,300 members in 150 colleges and universities. The colleges are divided into 10 regions which sponsor their own intercollegiate rodeos. The rodeos are held so that teams may win the necessary points to qualify for the Finals Rodeo in June.

The TAMU team won the Southern regional rodeo in 1972 and '73, also placing 11th in the nation in 1972. The girls' rodeo team placed third last year.
