Roloff Enterprises To Cease Operations

HOUSTON (AP) — Evangelist Lester Roloff says he will close his two children's homes Oct. 1 rather than seek a license from the State Department of Public Welfare.
 Evangelistic Enterprises Inc., Roloff's business, is under court order to cease operating the homes unless they are licensed by Oct. 1.
 The Houston Chronicle's Austin Bureau reports state Welfare officials as saying Roloff has made no effort to get a license, although licensing workers have made regular contact with him.
 The two homes are the Anchor Home for Boys near Zapata and the Rebekah Home for Girls near Corpus Christi.
 A third Roloff home in Texas, the Lighthouse on Padre Island, was permanently closed as a 24-hour child care center under a court order issued Aug. 3 by a Corpus Christi district judge.
 Roloff said most of the children at the two homes still operating have been sent home.
 "Our girls are being scattered," The Chronicle quoted Roloff as saying. "We've got some little girls 3,000 miles from home with no way to get back. You people in the news media and the welfare department ought to start collecting money for them."
 Roloff says it would be impossible for him to meet licensing requirements.
 A new law passed in the legislature this year requires the licensing of child care home operators. Roloff said his two superintendents could not meet the requirements "and I'd have to fire them after 15 years of good service."
 Roloff's main contention is that the state is unconstitutionally interfering with religion by requiring his homes to be licensed.
 However, Randy Pendleton, welfare licensing director, was quoted by the Chronicle as saying he would have "no choice" but to recommend to the attorney general that a contempt action be taken against Roloff should the homes operate after Oct. 1.

Merrie Melodies and Looney Tunes

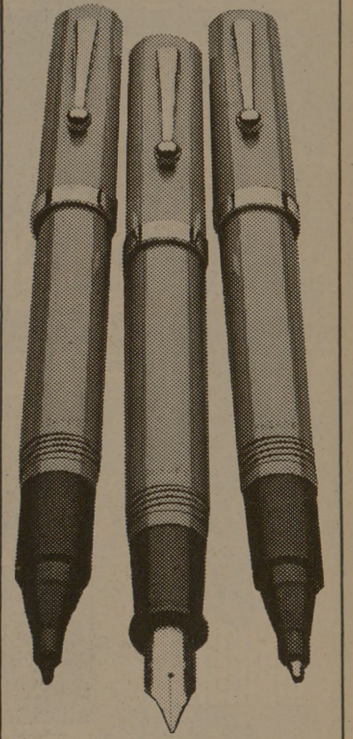

By TED BORISKIE
 The new Rolling Stones' album, "Goat's Head Soup," is out and is available at at least one area record store.
 There is not much to say about a new Stones album. They are, hands down, the No. 1 rock 'n' roll group in the world and each album they release is preceded by months of press coverage telling the public that it is on its way.
 Now that it is here it will be put on special by countless department stores; it will become the best-selling album in the U.S., it will be given a bad review in "Rolling Stone" and at least one other publication, another publication will name it record of the year, Stone freaks will religiously listen to it for three or four months and then the world will wait once again for the next one.
 The Stones make fine albums. Their LPs are so good so consistently it would seem that it would be impossible for them to make a bad album. So, needless to say, "Goat's Head Soup" is a fine album.
 After listening constantly to this album for a day (about 6-8 listenings) I like this more than anything the Stones have done since "Beggars Banquet." They have kept the horns pretty much in the background this time and deserve some sort of award for recording an album in Jamaica and resisting the temptation to put a reggae-flavored song on the disc.
 The Stones have kept pretty much the same personnel that have graced their last few records.
 They have added Billy Preston on keyboards, Chuck Finley on trumpet and Rebop on percussion but the rest are familiar faces; Nicky Hopkins and Ian Stewart on keyboards, Bobby Keys on sax, Jimmy Miller on percussion, etc.
 The album starts off with "Dancing with Mr. D," a fine little rocker that should become one of the most-played songs off this. Mick Taylor plays better everytime I hear him and his guitar on this is as good as anything he's done since joining the group in '69.
 "100 Years Ago" follows with Jagger doing some vocals that are head and shoulders above most of "Exile on Main Street." The song has a sudden break that is almost scary. The Stones have ruined enough songs before by suddenly changing tempos so I winced when I first heard them try again. But this time they seemed to have managed it pretty well.
 Hopkins plays an Elton John-ish intro on "Coming Down Again" but it more or less re-
