Agnew's Request Refused by House

WASHINGTON (AP) — Speaker Carl Albert has rejected for the time being any House action on Vice President Spiro T. Agnew's request for an investigation of charges he was involved in political corruption in Maryland.

That left a federal grand jury in Baltimore as the only forum scheduled to hear evidence on the allegations against Agnew. Atty. Gen. Elliot L. Richardson has ordered the panel to begin hearing that evidence Thursday morning.

Albert announced his decision on Agnew's request in a statement Wednesday afternoon.

"The vice president's letter relates to matters before the courts," the statement said. "In view of that fact, I, as speaker, will not take any action on the letter at this time." He refused to elaborate or answer questions.

Agnew's surprise request for the House investigation was made in a letter the vice president hand delivered to Albert Tuesday.

The vice president was on Capitol Hill Wednesday for lunch with 10 liberal Republican senators and told newsmen he had every intention of staying in office.

"I want to make it very clear that I am not resigning," he said. Agnew also said he would hold a news conference at some future point, but did not say when.

Agnew also was asked about news reports that he and his attorneys had engaged in plea bargaining with the Justice Department and a report that he had offered to resign in return for a reduction or dismissal of charges.

"At no time," he replied, "have either I or my attorneys initiated any plea bargaining."

Sen. Mark O. Hatfield, R-Ore., host for the luncheon, told a reporter later that the senators met with Agnew for more than an hour and that no one in the group believed Albert's rejection of Agnew's request was final or irrevocable.

Meanwhile, the White House said President Nixon had neither encouraged nor pressured Agnew to take any particular course in responding to or fighting the graft allegations against him.

Deputy White House Press Secretary Gerald L. Warren said he believed it would be improper for the White House to comment on Agnew's choice of methods for fighting the graft allegations but added that Nixon "respects the vice president's right and privilege to handle this in his own way."

On another matter, Warren said Nixon did not concur or need to concur in Richardson's decision to take Justice Department evidence against Agnew to the federal grand jury in Baltimore.

Parks, Recreations Takes on Goodwin

Have you wondered about the noise and sight of construction activity at Goodwin Hall? It is part of a "crash" remodeling project to help put new life into the old decaying building.

The project seems relatively minor standing next to the massive and spectacular J. Earle Rudder Conference Center. Yet, the interior construction taking place in Goodwin Hall is different and very timely.

Goodwin Hall was doomed for destruction after the Oceanography and Meteorology Departments vacated in favor of their present new facility. However, acute classroom shortage coincidental with TAMU's rapid growth prompted some faculty and administrators to help grant a stay of execution for the building.

Dr. Leslie Reid and his entire Parks and Recreation Department needed a new home. Dr. Reid said that, "basically we were concerned with getting additional classroom space and fast. Our past facility, popularly referred to as the Horse Barn, just became inadequate for our increased student enrollment."

The renovation of Goodwin Hall has taken on a "home project" flavor. Dr. Reid acknowledged that "the building was really in bad shape when we got the okay to start planning the move." Administrators decided that the structural condition of the building did not justify a major and expensive face lift. The objective became to make the place livable and yet keep costs at a minimum. "Essentially we are trying to add at least five years more useful life to the building," Reid explained.

Logan Council, director of the physical plant, concluded his department could make the renovation of Goodwin Hall presentable, comfortable and yet not prohibitively expensive. He and Dr. Reid decided to work with the exciting floor plan and configuration thus avoiding major rework.

"An outside contractor would find it difficult to compete on this job," Council noted. "We take a personalized handyman approach whereas the contractor must work to rigid specifications. Preparing specifications for a project of this nature would be a nightmare."

Some of the basic improvements include: improved wiring and lighting, additional air conditioning, painting, new flooring, acoustic ceilings and installation of low cost particle board paneling.

The basement section was taken over by 40 parks and recreation research and graduate assistants. In true "do it yourself" spirit, they fixed and painted their own study area.

Reid is highly complimentary for the efforts of General Alvin Lueddecke, TAMU executive vice president, and Logan Council, physical plant director. "Without their active assistance, the project just would not have jelled and become so successful," he concluded.
