Senate Defeats Trident Delay

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Senate today approved the Navy's accelerated schedule for construction of a new fleet of Trident super-submarines.

By a 49 to 47 vote, the Senate defeated an amendment to strip $885.4 million from a $21 billion weapons authorization bill. The amendment would have delayed completion of the first unit of a 10-vessel, $13 billion fleet from 1978 to 1980.

The delay was vigorously opposed by President Nixon and the Defense Department.

The Navy proposes to get the first of the 540-foot submarines, equipped with a new longer range 4,000-mile Trident missile, ready for launching by 1978.

At the White House, deputy press secretary Gerald L. Warren said President Nixon was "extremely gratified" with the rejection of the Trident amendment. Warren also restated the President's delight with the defeat of a move Wednesday to cut U. S. troop strength in Europe.

The Trident slowdown was proposed by Sens. Thomas J. McIntyre, D-N.H., and Peter H. Dominick, R-Colo., senior members of the Senate Armed Services subcommittee on research and development.

They argued that the Navy plan to put all 4 Trident submarines under construction before the first can be tested in operation risks without military justification, costly engineering errors.

McIntyre referred the Senate to cost overruns on the abandoned Cheyenne Helicopter and the F111 and C5A military aircraft as examples of proceeding with production before research, development and testing is completed.

Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., defended the accelerated Navy schedule as justified both from the standpoint of cost and the threat of recent Russian successes in nuclear weapon technology.

A two-year stretch out in the Trident program, he said, would cost the taxpayers an extra billion dollars, not counting inflation.

On the roll call, 19 Democrats and 30 Republicans supported the Trident speedup — a high priority item in this year's Nixon administration military budget. Ten Republicans and 37 Democrats voted for the slowdown.

The McIntyre-Dominick amendments would have trimmed $885.4 million from this year's $1.5 billion budget for the Trident system.

RHA to Establish Lights Near Chapel

The Resident Hall Association passed a resolution Thursday night to establish lights alongside the chapel on the way to the Keathley-Hughes-Fowler area.

The council established that temporary lights should be put in the dark area for the protection and convenience of the women students in the area.

Director of Student Activities

Ron Blatchley said there were plans to develop a temporary light system in the area until all construction was complete but did not know when this was to be done.

The association members were also confronted with the topic of an RHA weekend associated with Town Hall.

Town Hall has allotted $7,500 in its budget for the RHA weekend in the spring which will be effective if the new RHA constitution provides for such an event.

Groups between $10,000 and $20,000 dollars the RHA could consider if they split the ticket sales with Town Hall including John Denver, the Dobie Brothers, the Fifth Dimension, Roberta Flack, War, America and Emerson, Lake and Palmer.

The RHA did not make any final decisions on the groups but will make a preference order at the next meeting.

Ideas brought before the resident hall presidents included rideboards in each dorm lounge. Similar to the ride-board in the academic building, the boards would be a place where students could ask for rides or riders.

Discussion on the topic also included ideas on the establishment of such a board in the Memorial Student Center.
