Lacrosse Featured at Cowboy Game

By MARY RUSSO
The Dallas Cowboy organization will host the TAMU Lacrosse Association in exhibition play with Dallas all-star Lacrosse team as a pre-game attraction Sunday at Texas Stadium in Irving.

The Aggies will play two 15 minute quarters before and after the Cowboy-Giant warm-up.

"The Dallas organization has invited us in hopes of arousing more interest in the sport," said club president David Gruber. "Although within the last two years the number of Lacrosse teams in east Texas has increased from three to eight, there is room for more teams."

Gruber explained that the A&M club started off in the back lot of St Mary's Church with, "a couple of guys from the Northeast who had their own sticks and a Canadian who expressed an interest in learning."

The club hopes to field two complete teams by the spring season.

Originated by the Iroquois Indians as a preparation for war, the rules presently used are similar to those of soccer and ice hockey.

The basic aim of the game is to score goals. Attackmen advance the small rubber ball towards it by running or throwing.

The defense can knock the ball out of offensive possession as long as they avoid the opponent's head. Meanwhile, the attackman passes to maneuver the ball into a scoring position, staying out of the crease, a nine foot diameter circle surrounding the six by four foot goal.

The midfield is covered by players who act both offensively and defensively.

Penalties are called for technical or personal fouls and the punishment from the game, leaving his team a man short as in hockey.

Players are armed with a stick which supports a triangular net, used either in a downward or upward sweep. Protective gear includes a face cage helmet and arm pads and gloves like those of ice hockey.

Sporting this equipment Sunday as starters are Gruber, Kent Hubbard and Roger Livingston at attackmen. On defense will be Preston Juvenal, Fred LaGrasta, Mike Mohnkern and Win Whitens. Chris Litras, Gary Smolten and Rod Speer will start at midfield, with Phil Lesko protecting the A&M goal.

After the 0-4 record last year, Gruber hopes the team will improve play because, "They've all acquired some game sense and ability to relate with each other more."

Intramural Volleyball Spotlighted

League volleyball play was in the spotlight Wednesday as D2 met, C2 and M1 faced H1, in Class A.

Due to errors such as double hits, over-powered spikes and pushing, the C2 Cocks put themselves out of contention. Although they managed a first game victory, in the third game they tried too hard, got in each other's way and just couldn't get their heads together.

The D2 Dogs at first seemed leery of their playing, overpowering spikes and serves. Once he eased up, Gary Gooch managed to hit the Cocks' open spots aided by returns from the rest of the team, Bill Chancey, Andy McKemie, Hector Aldape, Andy Hel-wig and Phil Newton.

In a game very much akin to the one just described, M1 fell to H1. Both teams seemed skilled, but made the same mistakes of overpowering spikes and serving stepping on midcourt lines and misdirecting volleys.

H1 had some remarkably good sets, but failed to take proper advantage of them for spikes.

M1 had one good server, Carlos Bonnot, who kept his cool until his last term. Unfortunately, he fell apart when he could have done M1 the most good.

Also in the intramural spotlight are the bowlers who roll out 200 or above everytime they hit the alley. These are: L11 Rodger Draper with high point total of 263, followed by Schumacher's Fred Wilson at 228 with Craig Johnson from L24 Sq 14; with H2 14; tightly followed by Martin Pritchett and Schumacher with 212.

MEMBERS of the A&M Lacrosse Club scrap at close quarters for the rubber spheroid during an A&M practice session on the Drill Field. The team will play in an exhibition match before the Dallas Cowboys-New York Giants football game Sunday in Texas Stadium.
