Alaska Pipeline Bill OK'd by Conferees

WASHINGTON (AP)—House Senate conferees reached agreement Thursday on legislation approving construction of a 789-mile oil pipeline across Alaska from the North Slope to the southern coast.

Rep. John Melcher, D-Mont., chairman of the conference committee, said the bill probably will reach the House floor for a final vote in about two weeks. The House and Senate must approve or disapprove it as written. It cannot be amended.

In last-minute action, the conferees approved a plan making each oil company using the pipeline liable for $14 million in damages from marine oil spills. The firms will pay one to five cents per barrel into a pool for additional liability up to $100 million.

An earlier proposal for the government to insure the liability pool until the fund reached $100 million was scrapped.

In another final vote, the conferees approved an amendment requiring the Federal Trade Commission to consult with the Justice Department before bringing any court action. If the department does not act within 10 days, the commission will be free to take legal action in its own. Under present law, the commission will be free to take legal action on its own. Under present law, the commission must rely on the department to initiate court action.

The pipeline is designed to carry North Slope crude oil to the port city of Valdez on the Gulf of Alaska. It will be shipped by tanker to West Coast ports from Valdez.

The North Slope field contains at estimated minimum of 10 billion barrels of oil. The pipeline will carry two million barrels a day. The United States is expected to consume 22 million barrels, of oil daily by 1980.

The bill grants a 25-foot right of way on each side of the pipeline, plus additional footage as needed to accommodate construction, environmental and safety work.

It also contains language designed to block lawsuits by environmentalists seeking to delay the project.

Anthropologist Describes Ik Cultural Degeneration

The priest is the only one in the village who can hear the word of God. He goes to his son's home to die and pass on the sacred privilege.

"The hell with you," his son tells him. "If you die in my house I'll have to provide a funeral feast."

So the old man walks out of the village and dies.

This was one of the encounters Dr. Colin Turnbull experienced during his two years among the Ik tribe of Uganda.

Turnbull, a Scottish anthropologist, spoke to an overflowing crowd in the Zachry Engineering Center auditorium Thursday night. Those who could not find seats in the aisles or standing room in the back listened to Turnbull's presentation in an adjoining lecture room by a remote speaker system.

Turnbull presented his accompanying slide show twice so that those who were isolated from the first showing would not miss it.

Turnbull, educated at Oxford, wrote a book on his experiences.

"My book describes an unhappy situation," he said. "Although the Ik (pronounced eek) live in Africa they are unafrikan. I have met more humanity in Africa than anywhere else. The Iks are not human."

Three generations ago the Ik were like other African tribes, said Turnbull. They had a society, families and were cooperative.

They were hunters then. "Hunters are kind people," said Turnbull. Two thirds of their tribal lands were taken away for national parks by the Uganda government and the tribe is now in a state of extreme deprivation.

Turnbull told how, at the age of two, the Ik mother stops breast feeding her children and prepares them for life on their own. When the children are three they are thrown out of the house. During this year of preparation the mother gives a child every chance to die.

She will let it crawl into fires, cut itself and fall from any precarious positions the child happens to get into. One slide showed a boy about 2-years-old rubbing dirt into a hollowed out log. His parents had gone hunting and he was giving the dirt flavor so he could eat it.

Why do they raise children? "One woman explained to me that they would be useful if the fields were ever fruitful," said Turnbull. Pregnancy is not a happy occasion among the Ik, he said.

Sexual activity is minimal among the Ik, said Turnbull. "Their energy is better spent searching for food."

Each person in the Ik tribe provides for himself. One slide showed a couple eating dinner (See Anthropologist page 2)

Inflation Continues At 6.7 Per Cent

WASHINGTON (AP)—The country's economic growth during the third quarter of the year was just about what the Nixon administration wanted but inflation continued at a disappointingly high rate, the government reported Thursday.

The Commerce Department's third-quarter report on the Gross National Product included both good news, a favorable 3.6 per cent annual rate of real economic growth, and bad news, an inflation rate of 6.7 per cent. The over-all increase in GNP—which is the value of the nation's output of goods and services—was listed as up $32 billion, or 10.4 per cent, to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of $1.3 trillion.

The high rate of inflation was not a surprise. It had been clearly indicated by earlier government indexes on consumer and wholesale prices.

But the Nixon administration seemed sure to be satisfied with the 3.6 per cent increase in real economic growth, which followed the explosive 8.7 per cent growth rate of the first quarter and the low rate of 2.4 per cent in the second quarter.

Real economic growth is the over-all growth rate, minus growth attributed to inflation. The GNP is the nation's major measure of economic performance.

The administration has set four per cent as the target growth rate for the economy because it believes this rate is high enough to escape recession, but close enough to discourage new inflation.

Winner of 20 Grammys

Mancini to Perform in G. Rollie

The noted composer-arranger Henry Mancini will appear in G. Rollie White Coliseum October 26 at 8 p.m.

Tickets are $4 reserved and $2.50 general admittance for an A&M student or a student date. Patron tickets are $5 and $3.50. Tickets can be obtained at the Rudder Center box office.

Among his honors, Mancini has been awarded an unprecedented 20 Grammy Awards, Six Gold Album awards, and the Hollywood Foreign Press Association's Golden Globe.

Mancini has won three Academy Awards for his film work, and has been nominated 13 times.

Mancini began playing the flute at 8. He took up the piano when he was 12 and in a few years developed an interest in arranging.

After graduation from high school, Mancini attended the Juilliard School of Music in New York. His studies were interrupted by a draft call in 1943. He served overseas in the Air Force and later in the infantry.

After his discharge in 1945, Mancini joined the Glenn Miller-Tex Beneke Orchestra as a pianist-arranger.

Mancini continued his studies with composers Ernst Krenek, Mario Castelnuovo-Tedesco and Dr. Alfred Sendry.

In 1952 he joined the music department of Universal-International Studios and during the next six years contributed to over 100 films.

He received an Academy Award nomination for his work in "The Glenn Miller Story." His arrangements in "The Benny Goodman Story" and Orson Wells' "Touch of Evil" were also notable.

After leaving Universal-International Studios, Mancini was engaged to write the score to the TV series "Peter Gunn."

The album "The Music from Peter Gunn" was released in 1958 and won Mancini a Gold Record.

Gold records were also awarded to his albums "Breakfast at Tiffany's," "The Pink Panther," "The Best of Mancini," "Love Theme from Romeo and Juliet" and "A Warm Shade of Ivory."

Since Mancini returned to motion pictures he has scored 30 films. These include "The Great Imposter," "Hawaii," "Charade," "The Pink Panther," "What Did You Do in the War, Daddy," "Darling Lili," "The Hawaiians" and "Sometimes a Great Notion."

A jazz poll conducted by "Playboy" voted Mancini leader of the All-Star Orchestra in 1964, 1965, 1967, 1968, 1969 and 1970.

Mancini is currently hosting his show called the "Mancini Generation."

Jane Fonda Files Civil Suit Against Nixon, Officials

LOS ANGELES (AP)—A civil suit seeking $2.8 million was filed Thursday on behalf of actress Jane Fonda against President Nixon, men in his administration and former high government officials.

The complaint, alleging violations of Fonda's constitutional rights, was filed in federal court here by the American Civil Liberties Union Foundation. It names 20 individuals and two firms as defendants.

Fonda, holding a stack of papers she said was an FBI dossier on her, told a news conference she has been subjected to overt and covert physical surveillance, undercover intelligence gathering, intimidation and harassment because she is an outspoken critic of the Nixon administration and the Indochina war.

She said "the secret FBI file" had been given to her by Washington columnist Jack Anderson.

In Washington, Anderson said he had shown three or four Hollywood stars their FBI files. He said among them were Miss Fonda, Marlon Brando and Tony Randall.

The suit alleges that in November 1970, U. S. Customs Service agents at Cleveland International Airport unlawfully confiscated Fonda's personal address book, and before returning it turned it over to FBI agents, who allegedly copied the book's contents.

The complaint says that in January 1971 "unknown agents of the United States government" in Detroit burglarized Fonda's rented automobile of materials concerning a public inquiry into alleged atrocities committed by American servicemen in Vietnam.

The suit also alleges that the government obtained copies of Fonda's financial transactions without her knowledge and without a subpoena or warrant.

Tradition Singers Begin Third Year

The New Tradition Singers are a coed singing group in their third year and yet few students seem to have heard of them.

The group, composed of 35 men and 50 women, is directed by Robert L. Boone. It was founded two years ago as a social singing group.

Members are selected by audition and on the basis of their music background. Auditions are held during the first two weeks of each semester and at mid-term.

The hours and a half practice sessions are on Monday and Thursday night at 7 p.m.

The New Tradition Singers represent TAMU in concerts in addition to performing as a service and social group.

Last year they performed at the Texas Cotton Pageant the MSC Directorate and the Agriculture Extension Wives Club. They also held a Christmas program for the student body along with other luncheon and dinner engagements. In addition they sang during the Thanksgiving and Easter services for the YMCA.

As a service group they held an Easter egg hunt for the Bryan Boy's Club last year. This year they are planning a Christmas dance with the Aggie Jazz Band to benefit the Boy's Club.

The Singers first concert will be Nov. 1 at the Krueger-Dunn Commons for the Metermen's Short Course banquet. This spring they hope to go on tour.

Carol Silverthorne of Temple is president of the group. Other officers include: Harold Venable, vice-president; Debbie Richardson, secretary; Richard Feiden, treasurer; and Steve Smith and Rick Smith, public relations.
