Houston's Astrohall Scene Of Photography Show

The International Photo Show will be in Houston's Astrohall Thursday through Sunday.

The International Photo Show is produced by the leading international manufacturers and distributors of photographic equipment. It is designed to bring the art and craft of photography to the Houston area.

The program is composed of five basic areas: The Lecture Series, The Photo Gallery, The Equipment Fair, The Film and Slide Series and the Special Events Program.

The program will feature lectures on photography and photographic technique, a film and slide series and display demonstrations of cameras and other photographic equipment.

There will be a Photo Gallery consisting of photographs by nationally and internationally renowned photographers. There will also be work of established artists and journalists in the photographic field.

A group of models from Houston's Fashion IV Agency will pose for ready cameras. The show will also feature a display of antique cameras and prints.

A black photographers' exhibit will also be included in the Houston show. The black photo artists offer some of their histories and philosophies as a direct influence upon their work.

The International Photo Show is sponsored and produced by the International Photo Optical Show Association, Inc. The IPOSA is a non-profit organization dedicated to the promotion of fine photography and fine photographic equipment.

The International Photo Show reflects the artistic and educational aims of the IPOSA. It attempts to make the show a local event of relevance to the community by involving local artists, professionals and students.
