Batt Film Review

'Moon' is Film of the '30s

By JULIA JONES
"Paper Moon" may be the finest motion picture made this year.

If you like oldies but goodies on television, you will like "Paper Moon." The film is the essence of the thirties. From the depression scenery to Les Brown and his Band of Renown, it is the next best thing to being there.

Hotel clerks imitate the Valentino look and waitresses have platinum hair curled like Harlow to the last wave. When the radio is turned on, who do we hear but a 30 year old Jack Benny doing his number. This immersion into atmosphere has been criticized. The more prestigious the critic, the more intense the adverse criticism. They seem to feel that Pete Bogdanovich, who directed the picture, is imitating earlier directors. This may or may not be true, but they seem to have forgotten that entertainment is the name of the game, and not the display of a director's originality.

Ryan O'Neil and his daughter, Tatum, star. Both are marvelous, but don't go if you are expecting the usual O'Neil. He covers his face with a mustache and lets Tatum steal the show. None of the usual O'Neil charm shows. He plays a sweet, but rather dimwitted conman. What he gives up as a person he gains as an actor, however. He plays the part perfectly and lets the story stand out.

While attending the funeral of an old girlfriend, O'Neil is blackmailed into taking along the dead woman's child. Ostensibly taking her to her relatives, they end up partners in crime. This is entirely due to Tatum, who might be the most charming, precocious pre-adolescent ever. She immediately catches on to O'Neil's game and becomes his business manager.

There is a great bit with Jennie Berlin. She plays a used hoochie-coochie dancer, (they really called them that in the thirties), who has entranced O'Neil with her bumps and grinds. She has a fine mixture of vulnerable sweetness and naive calculation.

If I had any criticism of the picture it would be that it ends too soon. Everyone does their job so well that we want to follow them to further adventures. A good movie is better than Six Flags, and other things we do to amuse ourselves. But ultimately, we have to get up and go home to reality. It happens all too soon in this case.

"This economizing on bus service has gone far enough!"

Children to Benefit From Horse Show

A benefit horse show will be sponsored by the Saddle & Sirolo Club at the Aggie Rodeo Arena west of campus Sunday.

Registration begins at 8 a.m. and the show will start at 9.

The open youth show will be for the benefit of the Bryan-College Station Association for Retarded Children and the club hopes to make it an annual event.

Dr. Bill G. Jackson, 4-H Extension Specialist from Stephenville, will judge the show which consists of classes in showmanship at halter, English and Western Pleasure, English Equitation and Western Horsemanship, jumping, hunter, trail, reining, barrels and poles.

Anyone between the ages of 6 and 18 riding any breed or grade horse may participate in the classes open to his or her age group.

Parsons' Cavalry will perform during the noon break.

Ribbons will be given for places one through six and trophies will be awarded to the Champion and Reserve Champion Showman in each age group and to the overall and second high point individuals.

None of the classes are sponsored;

therefore, the success of the show depends on entry fees and admission. The fee is $2 per class. Admission is $2 for adults, 75 cents for students and 50 cents for children under 12.

Freshman members of the club will run a concession stand at the arena all day and black and white and color photographs will be available to the contestants. Proceeds from both of these sales will go to the Association for Retarded Children.

Children to Get Leftover Candy

Candy and goodies left over from Halloween trick-or-treaters are being collected for retarded children at the Austin State School.

On Christmas Eve, the candy will go to over 1,000 children who remain in the Austin dorms during the holiday season.

Persons wishing to contribute to the drive will find collection boxes at several elementary schools, kindergartens, supermarkets and stores and at TAMU.

Candy will be delivered to Austin Nov. 10 in vehicles of the 443rd Military Intelligence Detachment, a U. S. Army Reserve unit. Maj. Clarence Creger volunteered the Reserve help this year.

"This will be the 10th year we have collected leftover Halloween candy for the Austin school children," said Mrs. Mary Robinette. She and her husband Jim have organized the collection each year.

They noted that retarded children will not care if their Christmas candy is wrapped in orange and black instead of red and green.

Committee To Sponsor Tournaments

The MSC recreation committee will sponsor three tournaments Saturday and Sunday.

Registration for the Brazos Open Chess Tournament is at 8 a.m. Saturday in Room 20 of the MSC. Fee is $10 and United Chess Federation membership is required. Membership in it can be purchased at registration for another $10. The tournament will run through Sunday in five rounds of the Swiss system. The contest is open to all with no requirements except Chess Federation membership.

Registration for the Texas Aggie Bridge Tourney will be open until 1 p.m. Saturday in Room 228 of the MSC. Entry fee is 50 cents and partners are not required. Tournament director is James Payne.

A billiards tournament will be offered Sunday. There will be three classes of competition: beginning, intermediate and advanced. The game will be 14.1 continuous straight shot pool. The entry fee is $3 and registration will be in the billiards room.

Prizes will be given in each tournament.

Festival Offers Entertainment

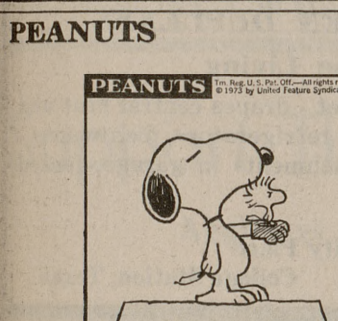

Eleven foreign students entertained and offered food and slides of their home countries Tuesday night at Prairie View's annual international festival.

Javier Vazquez & Pepe Lopez played guitar. Carcos Correa, Edgardo Varastegui, Violeta Som-bico, and Mirta Valencia sang. Others attending were Mrs. Mohammed Iman, Sayed El-Khat-tari, Dr. Adil Al-Mayyasi, Maye Ac-Mayyasi, and Fathallah Ben-Ali.

None of the classes are sponsored;

more is at stake here of exercising discipline. The Student Senate is policy, but I think it is detrimental to the reputation of the Corps. I praise those who have voted against and would hope the Directors taking stand to stand on campus and to exercise their campus for all
