HOUSTON — A state grand jury which returned 10 indictments in the Houston mass murders of 27 teen-aged boys ended its term Thursday with a blast at local law enforcement officials.

The grand jury issued a report critical of the police and district attorney's office, saying their investigation "lacked professional imagination, thoroughness and professional coordination."

The jurors said the Houston police abandoned the investigation about Sept. 1, leaving unexplored "the possible involvement of others and related criminal activities."

AUSTIN—The 37 citizen members of the Texas Constitutional Revision Commission who labored seven months to produce a proposed new state constitution placed it in the hands of the Texas Legislature Thursday.

"We do not suggest that this is a perfect constitution," said Robert W. Calvert, commission chairman and former chief justice of the Texas Supreme Court, at the climax of a historic ceremony in the Texas House.

MADISON, Wis. — Karleton L. Armstrong, who pleaded guilty to charges in the 1970 University of Wisconsin bombing that killed a physics researcher, was sentenced Thursday to 23 years in prison.

"Long live the revolution," the bearded Armstrong shouted after Circuit Court Judge William Sachtjen sentenced him on a second-degree murder charge.

The 27-year-old former University of Wisconsin student walked out of the courtroom with his right fist raised in salute. Supporters in the audience responded, "Right on, Karl."

Armstrong, who has been in custody since his arrest in Canada early last year, would be eligible for parole in five years. He still faces federal charges in connection with the bombing, in which physicist Robert Fassnacht, 33, was killed.

WASHINGTON — President Nixon nominated Ohio Republican Sen. William B. Saxbe as attorney general Thursday and promised full independence for a new special Watergate prosecutor, Texas trial lawyer Leon Jaworski.

Nixon gave his personal assurance that he would not fire the new special prosecutor as he did Archibald Cox without getting approval from congressional leaders of both parties.

UNITED NATIONS, N. Y. — Nonaligned members of the U.N. Security Council sought Thursday to break a Soviet-U.S. deadlock on which countries should send troops to join the U.N. Mideast peacekeeping force, sources said.

After a private meeting of the council was recessed, council informants said U. S. Ambassador John Scali and Soviet Ambassador Jacob A. Malik disagreed over whether Eastern European countries should contribute troops to the force.

Earlier, a U. N. official saw the possibility Thursday of a deal over the weekend to put Eastern European troops into the U. N. buffer zone.

MEROM GOLAN, Israel—The small contingent of Israeli women serving with combat units in the barren, windswept Golan Heights have put away their miniskirts and put on ski masks and fur-lined parkas.

The life is rough — camping in pup tents in freezing temperatures, manning communications equipment 24 hours a day and living without a bathroom.

But there are no complaints. In fact, there's a tremendous pride in being about as close to combat as the women's army permits, rather than in an office in Tel Aviv.

Student Awards Meeting

TAMU engineering cooperative students will meet Nov. 12 in Room 102, Zachry Engineering Center, for the fall Student Awards meeting.

The meeting will recognize outstanding student contributions to the co-op program, research papers, and employer evaluation reports received by co-op officials in the past year.

Texas Power and Light will host a picnic following the awards ceremony at Hensel Park. A firm engaged in TAMU's co-op program customarily makes a presentation on company activities to students during the awards meeting, then sponsors a picnic following the formal activities.

Eleven Pilots Assigned

Eleven TAMU graduates recently donned Air Force wings and went on flying assignment.

They are among more than 120 former TAMU students who joined Air Force pilot and navigator ranks in the last 13 months.

The new pilots trained at Laredo, Webb, Reese and Laughlin AFBs in Texas, Vance AFB Okla., and Columbus AFB Miss. They are now flying everything from F-4s to bombers for the Tactical Air Command, Military Airlift Command, Air Training Command and Strategic Air Command at bases throughout the U. S.

Three navigators and a navigator-bombardier trained at Mather AFB, Calif.

Physics Colloquium

Prof. J. Ruvalds of the University of Virginia will speak at a physics colloquium at TAMU Monday.

Prof. Ruvalds' lecture on "Excitations in Quantum Liquids" is scheduled for 4 p. m. Nov. 5 in Room 146 of the TAMU Physics Building.

Ruvalds, an associate professor in the UV Department of Physics, is known for his work on the final-state interactions between the "particles" of condensed matter.

Amendments

taxpayers may be taxed, straight and simple. The new methods would be more confusing to the voter who might be misled by officials concerning tax effects of bond elections.

Amendment 9
Amendment 9, if passed, will enable the legislature to exempt non-profit water corporations from property and equipment taxes. Presently municipal water suppliers have special tax exemptions but private water supply companies, both profitable and non-profit, do not.

Those favoring amendment 9 feel that for some to have to pay more for their water merely because they do not live in a municipality is fundamentally unfair. In some cities water is supplied by both municipal and private companies. In such cases persons living in the same town may have different rates for their water.

Opponents of amendment 9 say this proposition is merely an unnecessary special interest exemption. The revenue lost will have to be made up by higher taxes for everyone. Some feel if inequities exist the municipal exemption should be removed instead of new exemptions added. Exemptions create a false impression in the taxpayers mind as to the price he is paying for water. His water bill might go down but the difference would in part be made up through increased taxes.

Some conservationists also oppose amendment 9 and instead favor the removal of the municipal plant tax exemption. They reason that reductions in the price of water encourages use of a resource not being replenished as fast as it is depleted.
