

Administrators Respond to Black Student Demands

(Continued from page 1) posed to this profession and therefore do not center their courses towards this field. Also, those that can do the work scholastically go into human medicine." He added, "This college has not made any recruitment effort but has by no means discouraged any Negro applicants. We give serious consideration to all applicants." "I don't think we have been guilty of sins of commission; but I think perhaps of omission," said

Dr. Monroe. Tom Nelson, field director for former students, said there is an intensive recruitment program in high schools handled by former and present students. He did not know of any BAC involvement in this. "Texas A&M doesn't have the outstanding students it does just because of our reputation. It takes people who are involved and interested to go out and get them here," said Nelson. "Power Through Education at Texas A&M," a 56-page booklet written by members of the BAC, financed and published by The Former Students Association, is being distributed to high schools to present the black student side of A&M to students.

Listen Up— Halftime Deplored

(Continued from page 2) perverted. This cannot be brushed off as the actions of a few, either. Well over 500 students participated and they came from all walks of life—ROTC command and civilian freshmen alike had the blood-lust. I was with the Rice band visiting friends (if you can while being pelted with ice and gravel) and I refuse to accept any excuse for the A&M students behavior. I deny that anyone that participated is a true Aggie. I certainly wish for their expulsion. To those who are thinking "Highway 6 runs both ways," I agree. So why don't you mindless children pack up and leave? Donald Hackler '73

It is never right to tell anyone to run away from their problems and for that reason your Highway 6 syndrome must be considered invalid. The student body should be expected to react the way it did in defense of school tradition. Violent reaction, such as made by a former student in an attack on a "Mob" bandsman, is indefensible. We suggest the matter be dropped, but not forgotten. It should be remembered as a lesson in dealing with human nature. —Ed.

Gynecologist

(Continued from page 1) of a gynecologist if you're going to take them because of the side effects. You can't minimize the need for a gynecologist if you're going to take birth control pills. You also need planning and health-education training. Pat Self, women's counselor, said that the students were going to have to think in terms of very direct planning. "There is so much more to a gynecologist than just the pill. Through my own office have come many men and women where I can see the need for education along this line."

Self also said that the director of the Health Center, Dr. W. R. Powe, would very much like to have a gynecologist on his staff but such a person would have to be able to function as a general practitioner when not focusing on women's concerns. "The decision as to whether or not to hire a gynecologist is now left up to Dr. Powe," said Sears, who added that the policy had just been recently changed by Williams to allow Powe to do what he wanted. Olivo said she understood it would cost around $35,000 a year to offer the services of a gynecologist.

"But birth control is just as much a man's problem as it is a woman's," said Olivo. "A gynecologist would also be able to provide the counseling needed by both men and women experiencing pre-marital sex." "I'm wondering what our parents will think about pills being so readily available," said Judy Brockett. "I know mine would get mad if they knew I had gotten the pill from the Health Center." "I don't think we can consider parents' involvement," said Olivo. "It is the personal decision of the individual. He or she will probably hold on to his beliefs regardless of whether or not the Center supplies some form of contraceptives."

"Are students ready to accept premarital relations as a way of life?" asked Smith. "And how much am I doing to keep it from being a destructive way of life?" Self pointed out to Smith that there were three gynecologists in the immediate area with one serving the University on a limited basis. "So many times girls are confused as to whether or not they are pregnant," said Mary Ann Glueck, head resident adviser for Krueger. "We're not qualified for the counseling they need. What they need is a source to be able to go to for information." Wooten said there was a rise of venereal disease and that many persons of both sexes were uneducated in this area and needed somewhere to get the information.
