Volunteer Help

A moderate electricity brown out took place almost a year ago here as University Purchasing Agent Herb Gersbach was just beginning his diligent search for enough fuel to keep the University operating. And for University officials, the energy crisis has been uppermost on their minds since the beginning of the year.

Within the next few days, the unveiling of plans to cutback electrical demands at TAMU will probably occur as the special Energy Management Committee, chaired by Dr. Richard Wainerdi, met today. We have been advised that recommendations will most likely come out of this meeting for immediate approval and instrumentation. These recommendations were fairly well developed in what was termed last year as Phase I of an energy cutback program, which is still being developed.

Last week, we met with the Energy Information Subcommittee of the EMC to help work out plans for the most efficient handling of news of cutbacks and how to conserve fuel. One of the main points stressed in the meeting was that citizens with a valid and reasonable suggestion should get in touch with the committee. This can be done easily by calling The Battalion.

The crisis is real and is already causing adjustments in lifestyles, industry, commerce and the stock market. All tips and voluntary help should certainly be appreciated by all citizens.

Acquiring the News

Statements made recently by a member of the Black Awareness Committee about the extent of campus news coverage by The Battalion, prompted us to explain how we get our news.

The writing staff of The Battalion consists of only 10 regular people and these few people can never hope to be omni for all events, speeches, committee meetings, or otherwise without help from students and faculty. Surely, if there was at least a sense of competitiveness among our own journalism students, we might not be facing this problem. Therefore, reader attention to current events becomes quite important to us.

The staff of The Battalion could cover more committee meetings and alert others to more coming events and meetings in Bulletin Board and a meeting schedule. But, these must be submitted to The Battalion before 9 p.m. two days beforehand.

A common complaint also occurs when critics say all events covered by The Battalion are Student Government or administratively related. To some extent this is true, but only because these people go out of their way to create news for us and tell us about it. On many stories, though, a good deal of research needs to be done—and there's a lot of news here, too. However, the size of our writing staff stretches only so far.

If you've got a story to tell us, a problem, or just a hometown meeting to announce, get it to us. Help us help everyone stay in the know.

Good Show—So Far

A sound start has been made on the massive task of rewriting Texas' antiquated constitution. After seven months of public hearings, research and deliberation, the 37-member Constitutional Revision Commission has produced an impressive document for consideration by the Legislature, sitting as a constitutional convention in January.

The revision panel draft strengthens the three branches of government, substitutes flexibility and broad principle for the detailed, constrictive language of our Reconstruction-era state charter, and it is only a fourth the length of the present document.

The convention delegates can improve on the commission's draft, but they should not dilute its basic strengths. As essential to the revision effort as producing a modern, streamlined constitution will be keeping the public informed on the progress of the work. It will in turn be our responsibility as voters to understand not only the convention's final recommendations but how they were formed.

The revision commission has shown that it understands the importance of public participation in the revision process and of keeping us informed so we can properly evaluate its work. It began with public hearings throughout the state at which citizens could express their views on a new constitution. Its subsequent deliberations were open to the press and the public. It has kept the news media informed of every step of its progress. It has not shied away from controversy or attempted to hide differences of opinion among its members. On the contrary, it has exercised admirable candor.

The commission recently installed a toll-free phone in its Austin headquarters to answer citizens' questions and has scheduled a series of 20 public meetings across the state to discuss its work. The Houston meeting will be on Nov. 28 at the Rice Hotel. This is a promising beginning for the revision effort. Now those responsible for keeping this information pipeline open must follow through, both during and after next year's constitutional convention. And we, the voters, should take advantage of it so that we can intelligently judge the convention's final product.

Schools Boost Petition

Heard from your favorite Southwest Conference female athlete yet? Probably not, seeing as there presently are none here, or at any other SWC School. The main obstacle to female eligibility for competition with members of the same sex from other schools is the interpretation of a SWC rule that says only men can compete.

Newspapers from schools within the conference have banded together to bring and press attention to the growing number of women competing in club athletics and the rising need for SWC recognition of the opposite sex. The complexity of the TAMU Women's Sports Association attests locally to the need. The Battalion would like to help push this issue into discussion by our own athletic council, chaired by Dr. Charles Samson.

The issue, just gaining momentum as awareness of women's rights grows, arises with a great deal of timeliness. Southwest Conference officials are slated to meet Dec. 6-8 and, hopefully, the idea may be passed for immediate approval or at least committee consideration.

A petition, which is being reprinted on this page is being circulated by university papers and women's groups at other conference schools for presentation to their respective athletic councils and to the SWC as a whole. Although the petition may not result in immediate implementation of women's sports, it would show the amount of interest prevalent in the student community.

It would be appropriate for the Women's Awareness Workshop here to help develop the petition's effectiveness, even the point of preparing it for the National Collegiate Athletic Association's January meeting. Samson is TAMU's representative to this meeting.

Drawbacks have been raised by several officials in the conference, who cite a lack of money as the main problem. The only money maker in the athletic program here is football, despite the fact that other sports are capable of making money.

But, athletic departments don't seem to realize that. Consequently, it seems that the athletic departments' efforts are concentrated around perpetuating football as a money maker, above and beyond all other sports.

As long as things remain that way, there will never be any money for women's athletics at the university. But, students pay to attend the university. So, since we're paying, we might as well have a little say in some of the practices of this university.

So clip out this petition and pass it around to all students. The petitions can be returned to The Battalion, the Dean of Women's Office, or the Student Government Office in the MSC. It's the only way to tell the Athletic Council what we, the students, feel about this issue.

A PETITION

We hereby call upon the Athletic Council of Texas A&M University to take all steps necessary to immediately create a complete fully funded program of intercollegiate athletics for women within the Department of Intercollegiate Athletics.

We also call upon the Southwest Conference to create a program of intercollegiate athletics for women and finally end all sex discrimination in athletics at its nine member schools.

Please fill this petition with signatures and send to The Battalion, to the Student Government office at the Memorial Student Center or to the Dean of Women's Office.

Suggestions Made For Post-Thanksgiving Blues

Editor:

After experiencing Thanksgiving at A&M, I am thankful that it is over. I don't believe that anyone should gripe against the system without rebutting with solid facts and pertinent suggestions. So hold on to your hat.

Why must I be restricted to only sitting with my friends who are in my class, or those who have the same color activity card? Our school's answer is that they plainly don't want to condone homosexuality. Is going to the game with a friend of the same sex homosexuality? Do you support the answer? So what happens, many people don't end up sitting where their ticket specifies. My answer is simple. Why not permit an upperclassman to get one underclassman ticket, whether it be a date or not. There are always skeptics who say that many Aggies will abuse this privilege. Maybe, but if one person gets a ticket for another, he is going to have to sit with him at the game. I can't think of any better way to meet other people than to root for the Ags (not the Army) together.

Then there's Town Hall. You might ask, "Yeah, where is Town Hall?" and I say to you, "Damn good question." Take a minute and look at your Aggie lands, of the past few years, at the Town Hall "group" picture. How many uniforms do you see? Does it make you wonder why we haven't seen: SGT BARRY SADLER CONDUCTS THE TEXAS AGGIE BAND? The Corps is 18 percent of the student body and 85 percent of Town Hall. Talk about a military coup . . .

Why can't we get some above average entertainment around here? One answer may be the students. Many students feel compelled to go to a concert, just because they are "good Ags." So, it doesn't matter who Town Hall gets (as long as they're cheap); they know it will be a sellout and the Aggies will come. Has Town Hall ever heard of: The Guess Who, Three Dog Night, Johnny Cash, Bill Cosby or the Moody Blues, just to name a few? Has Town Hall ever thought of an open-air concert in Kyle Field? I can think of nothing better to sit next to my date (warm side and out) and freak-out to good concert. Noise pollution Aggies make more noise fighting farmers at a football game. Rain? Tents for the players and umbrellas for the fans. More! How many times bigger is Kyle Field than G. Rolie?

Come on Ags, let us all cheer for the better!

Lee Blumenthal

Main considerations for groups such as you've named are that they aren't cheap and many do not play college campuses. They get quality groups. Town Hall needs more money and better tandance for the more expensive concerts. The group started this semester with a $7,000 deficit, lost $3,000 on the Henry March concert and, hopefully, broke even with its Mancini loss with the Johnny Rivers concert. Many colleges have many small concerts that are just as good as the big ones. One question: have you attempted to get on the Town Hall Selection Committee? All students can serve on this—

These coupons and three 8c stamps can save you a bundle.

If you've flown recently you know that a youth fare ticket costs about 50% more than it did last year. By this time next year, youth fares will be a thing of the past.

Unless you do something about it. That's because the Civil Aeronautics Board (CAB) thinks that airlines shouldn't discriminate by charging some people less money for tickets than other people.

Despite the fact that some people have less money than other people. And despite the fact that most of the airlines believe youth fares should be retained since last year they accounted for over 9-million trips and $400 million in revenues.

We Right Wrongs

Shortly after the CAB's announcement last December, the National Student Lobby began a campaign to override the Board's decision. Together with representatives of industry, labor, other citizens groups, and like-minded senators, we recently won passage of a bill which would create youth and senior citizen discounts on all domestic flights.

Similar legislation is now pending in the House.

Your Lobby Needs You

To push this bill through, though, your help is required. Lobbyists can act legislators when they already see our point of view, but only an aroused constituent can make a Congressman change his mind.

So we'd like to encourage you to use the coupons at the bottom of this ad (or better still, write your own letter, or send a telegram).

One goes to Cong. John Jarman of Oklahoma, Chairman of the House Transportation and Aeronautics Subcommittee. Ask him to hold hearings immediately and support HR 2698.

sponsored by Rep. John Keating and 86 other representatives. This bill, if passed, will create discount air fares for both young people and senior citizens.

The second coupon goes to your Congressman. Tell him that you expect him to support HR 2698 or similar legislation. And tell him that you'll remember how he votes the next time you vote.
