Duo Becomes Doctors on Same Day

Tish and Sam Self have common interests that might be the envy of other husbands and wives.

The graduate students like to fish and travel. But there hasn't been much time for either lately.

Both will be awarded the Ph.D. at commencement Dec. 15 at Texas A&M.

They even defended their dissertations for the doctorate degree on the same day. That means Tish and Sam suffered their pre-defense tension together, not to mention the extensive research, analysis and writing that went into the dissertations.

Now that's all behind them and the husband-wife team that has contributed to Texas A&M as faculty-staff members is looking forward to fulltime work in education.

The Selfs will climax more than 14 years work and preparation toward that goal at fall semester commencement.

"I'll probably get the Ph.D.

first," Mrs. Self smiled mischievously at her husband. "Patricia comes before Samuel alphabetically."

"Not if they go by Tish," he rejoined. That's how most know the counselor in the Dean of Women's office. She has worked with coeds since starting work for the doctorate in educational psychology in 1968.

Sam Self, who once participated in missile trajectory research at the White Sands range, is a candidate for the Ph.D. in educational curriculum and instruction. He was a research assistant two years at the Cyclotron Institute.

Now a research assistant in the Curriculum and Instruction Department, Sam was with Cyclotron Institute two years in a similar capacity and edited Geo-News for the College of Geosciences.

"The key to our success is one another," he confessed. Both credited their committee chairmen. Supervising Tish Self's doctoral work was Dr. Robert R. Reilly of the Educational Psychology Department. C&I Department Head Dr. Glenn Johnson chaired Sam's committee.

A couple of pieces of furniture also played key roles in getting the Selfs onto the G. Rollie White Coliseum stage Saturday week.

"Mine was a $4.95 piece of junk, an old table I'm thinking of having bronzed," Tish joked. Covered with contact paper, it provided ample space for research materials to be spread out and kept close at hand.

"Mine was a birthday present I really didn't want," Sam remarked. "Tish gave it to me and I thought it was the last thing I needed at the time. I went through three degrees on it."

The Selfs earned their first two degrees at UT-El Paso, where they met at a fraternity party and married their sophomore year.

He was formerly from Gadsden, Alabama, and she grew up in Holyoke, Mass. The first movie they saw was "Gone With the Wind."

"Sam kept nudging me and saying, 'See, see, that's the way it was,'" Tish recalled.

They plan to go on into teaching and research. Mrs. Self wants to stay in student personnel services, with emphasis on counseling. With his background in physics, Sam plans on working toward improving teaching procedures of college physics.

After Saturday though, they want to travel some "If we get some gasoline." They also have a favorite spot near El Paso to "just relax with some beer and a couple of old rusty fishing poles."
