Nixon ups milk prices after contributions

WASHINGTON (AP) — A 1971 memorandum to the then White House chief of staff, H. R. Halde- man, reported that dairy industry officials had committed themselves to contribute $90,000 a month to President Nixon's reelection campaign.

"Lee Nunn reports that $232,500 has been realized," said the memorandum from Gordon Strachan, a Haldeman assistant who was liaison with the reelection committee. "This is slightly more than one half of the amount that should have been delivered on the commitment $90,000 per month."

Nunn was deputy to finance committee chairman Maurice Stans.

The memorandum was filed this week in federal court as an exhibit in a consumer lawsuit by Ralph Nader and others in the dairy fund case. It was termed "a representative sampling of documents turned over to plaintiff's counsel."

The Strachan memorandum was dated Sept. 11—nearly six months after higher milk price supports were put into effect on President Nixon's order.

A "white paper" issued by Nixon earlier this month detailed the history of the price support increase and said "it is fallacious to suggest that the President's decision was influenced by a promise of political contributions from the dairy industry."

Another Strachan memorandum to Haldeman, dated Sept. 16, 1971, said that presidential aide Charles W. Colson "confirmed that he had made a separate arrangement to obtain five thousand."

"This money was committed by John D. Ehrlichman but never delivered in connection with a project we, Colson and Ehrlichman, worked on together," the memo added.

The project referred to may have been the Sept. 3, 1971 break-in at the office of Dr. Lewis Fielding, a psychiatrist who had been treating Daniel Ellsberg. A White House group known as the plumbbers conducted the burglary. They were under the general supervision of Ehrlichman, who has been indicted for conspiracy, burglary and perjury in Los Angeles.

Egil Krogh Jr., who pleaded guilty in the Ellsberg break-in case, has said in an affidavit that funds for the burglary were supplied after he asked Colson for money.

Strachan's Sept. 11 memo also referred to "a much more disturbing element."

He said Frank Wright, a reporter for the Minneapolis Tribune, had interviewed six of the chairmen of the financial "front committees" in the campaign and Washington public relations man Robert Bennett.

"Bennett has told Nunn that no damaging information has been released," the memo said, adding that the development had been discussed among high officials of the campaign.

Strachan also said some of the officials thought that Colson had established a separate agreement with the milk people "in order to have cash available."

Women's hall changes

Women students may change rooms within their four-hall residence area through Jan. 30.

Housing Manager Allan Madley reminded that students living alone for the spring semester must pay one-third extra room rent, unless consolidation with another student is impossible.

Women students reside in Krueger, Hughes, Fowler and Keathley Halls.

A student wishing to change rooms within her present hall should contact the head resident or head resident advisor Friday. Women planning direct changes should report together.

Hall changes will be made Tuesday or Wednesday at the Housing Office. Vacancies will be assigned on a first-come, first-served basis. Fee slips must be shown and moves completed within 24 hours.

Students who have signed phone contracts for long distance privileges are responsible for reporting room changes to the company.

African lecture

Dean Oyen of the University of Minnesota will discuss his recent African anthropological studies with the famed Louis Leakey family at a lecture Tuesday.

Fossil Evidence for Early Man in East Africa: A Discussion of Dr. Leakey's Latest Discoveries.

Oyen, who teaches human anatomy and is a Ph.D. candidate in anthropology at the University of Minnesota, spent a year researching baboon anatomy and behavior in Kenya.

Engineering discussion

Senior students in mechanical engineering will hear a discussion of career opportunities in the petrochemical industry Thursday at 10 a.m. in room 203 of the Zachry Engineering Center.

Thomas H. Meadows, chief engineer in Exxon Corporation's Katy District, will be guest speaker in the first session of the Mechanical Engineering Department's spring 1974 senior seminar series.

Directed by Associate Professor James H. Caddess, the seminars offer seniors exposure to leading mechanical engineering professionals and educators in discussion sessions.
