

Municipal and industrial pollution control personnel from a six-county area around Bryan College Station registered Monday for a two-week instrumentation course. The 80-hour course, instructed by J. R. MacInis, Engineering Extension Services instructor in pollution control and water utilities training, will cover training in the operation and maintenance of automatic and remote control equipment used in water treatment and water reclamation plants. The course is being conducted at the University Reclamation Plant near Easterwood Airport, according to MacInis. He said lectures and "hands-on" training will be featured in the course.

'G-II' fills vacant job on Corps Staff

By SALLY HAMILTON
Staff Writer

People seeking the Personnel Sergeant on Corps Staff will find a new face this semester.

Granville Lasseter II, a junior from Midland, replaces Dan Gibbs, who resigned before semester break. Lasseter, known to his friends as "G-II," attended Navarro Junior College the first semester of his freshman year.

"I went there to play football but I couldn't see much future in the sport. While I was there I got interested in Texas A&M," Lasseter said.

Lasseter joined the Corps of Cadets at mid-term during his freshman year. He was a member of Squadron Five and was promoted to 1st Wing Staff for his junior year. Lasseter is on contract with the Marines and plans to go into the Marine aviation program upon graduating and receiving his commission.

He is a member of the Junior Class Council, the Flying Club, and a Ross Volunteer.

Lasseter is filling one of the main decision-making slots on Corps Staff.

"This is mainly what Corps Staff does: to look at every problem and issue maturely and comes up with the best objective solutions and policies to better the Corps in the future," Lasseter said.

At least one member of each act must be a student, faculty member or staff member. Sign-up deadline is Feb. 15.

Cash prizes will be awarded to the top acts on the night of the show, March 30, to be held in Rudder Auditorium. Admission is required for the Sophomore class sponsored show. Interested people call Mike Alford at 845-1779.

changes will be implemented and all interested in working are urged to come.

Debate trip

The A&M Debate Club will be traveling to Harvard University this weekend to compete in the tournament there.

Allison Berry and John Miller will be representing A&M in this competition. They will be debating whether the United States Government should "control" the supply and utilization of energy in the United States.

Sponsored by Russedd Usnich of the English Department, debate classes are now being held every Monday night at 6:30 in room 325 of the Academic Building. Anyone interested is invited to attend free of charge.

Resources lecture

Dr. Douglas L. Gilbert of Colorado State University will speak on "Natural Resources Management and Public Relations" Friday.

The lecture, sponsored by the Department of Wildlife and Fisheries Sciences, is scheduled for 7:30 p.m. in Room 601 of the J.

Earl Rudder Conference Center Tower.

Dr. Gilbert, assistant dean of the College of Forestry and Natural Resources at CSU, has been involved in promoting natural resources conservation and management in recent years.

Band meeting

The University Symphonic Band will continue organizing Monday in a 7:30 p.m. meeting.

Student musicians should assemble in the E. V. Adams Band Hall.

Director Joe McMullen said early registration in December included at least 125 students. "Anyone interested at all or who plays an instrument and wants to know more about the band should be at the meeting," he said.

McMullen indicated the band will perform in public this semester. Auditions will begin Feb. 11.

The first rehearsal will be Feb. 20. Practice will take place at the band hall on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays during the noon hour.

The director stressed that any student interested in the symphonic band, whether present or not at the first meeting, should attend the Monday meeting.

Colors presentation

Capt. William Gross, a graduate student in civil engineering, was presented unit colors in Saturday ceremonies transferring the Army Reserve unit he commands from Hilo, Hawaii to Bryan.

Capt. Gross received the unit guidon standard from Brig. Gen. O. D. Butler, commander of the 420th Engineer Brigade and head of the Animal Science Department.

Cavalry award

Parsons Mounted Cavalry won a prize for its appearance in the Southwest Fat Stock Show and Exposition parade in Fort Worth.

The TAMU troop won second for riding groups. The Friday parade included 87. A plaque was
