Dollar's fall analyzed

JOSCHIM SCHELIEM

Although few can understand luctant to make any predictions Scheliem, German journalist, claims to know the basic reasons.

Scheliem began his Wednesday noon speech entitled "How the dollar fell" as the sparce and scattered audience, most of whom sat at the back of the room, began taking notes.

The fate of the dollar has been the result of non-productive spending at home and abroad, explained Scheliem. He mentioned space-exploration and non-productive welfare spending. "Wars are non-productive," he said and added, "the U.S. has been notorious for foreign wars."

Now it seems the chickens may be rising first again.

Daylight Savings Time is in serious danger of being repealed. The attack is coming at both the state and federal levels where many government officials are far from convinced that DST is saving energy.

A Friday news release from local State Representative Bill Presnal's office indicated that Presnal had petitioned Governor Dolph Briscoe to exempt the Central Time Zone area of Texas from DST. Thirty legislators have signed the petition, the news release said. Representative Ben Bynum of Amarillo has been polling state legislators on the matter, and has found 75 to 80 percent of those polled to be in favor of repeal. Tuesday, Governor Briscoe asked for legislation to abolish

DST. He also stated that he felt the current federal legislation should be repealed. Texas is eligible to exemption zones. Federal legislation allows such a state to place itself entirely in one time zone. Bills have been introduced in both houses of Congress to do away with DST. The Federal Energy Office is meanwhile asking
