Campus Briefs

Parson's cavalry

Jeff Johnson of San Angelo has been chosen commander of Parsons Mounted Cavalry for 1974-75 school year.

The cavalry troop was organized this year and named for the commandant, Col. Thomas R. Parsons.

It has marched in numerous on-campus events, won second for riding units in Fort Worth's Livestock Show and Exposition parade and will appear again this year.

The troop will march in the Parent's Day review of the Corps of Cadets and is planning a trip to San Antonio for the Fiesta

Flambeau parade.

Johnson, a junior animal science major, will succeed Mike Collins of Dallas as commander.

Serving with Johnson next year will be John R. Myers executive officer, Channelview; Tom Horton, San Angelo, and Timothy Carter, Corpus Christi, platoon leaders, and Jeff Lively, first sergeant, Houston.

The all-senior troop will have 34 members next fall noted Capt. Charles Holland, advisor. Four will be alternates. He said juniors have been in training this semester.

Government positions

Filing for Student Leadership positions will close March 20 at 5 p. m.

The positions open include senate, executive positions residence hall association officers, class officers, the graduate student council and yell leaders.

Students will not be able to file over spring break. Filing will be closed from March 8 until 8 a. m. March 18.

Filing opened March 6.
No filers or large, staked signs

High school drill meet

The Texas high school drill champion will emerge Saturday from competition here.

Ten teams will battle for the 1974 crown in the day-long meet. Martin High School of Laredo returns to defend the 1973 title. The Laredo entry will be going for its third straight championship.

Also aiming for the state title trophy will be teams from Robert E. Lee and MacArthur High Schools of San Antonio; Bellaire, Killeen, Marine Military Academy, Harlingen; Beaumont and Beaumont French High Schools, Ball High, Galveston and Wichita Falls High.

Points awarded in the three-phase meet will decide the winner. Eleven trophies will be presented by Maj. James Starr of the Texas will be allowed to be put up until March 16, said Barry Bowden, Election Board Chairman.

Applications are available in the Student Programs Office in the MSC. All applicants are asked to read paragraphs 67 and 68 of University Rules and Regulations.

Applicants for president, vice president or senator must pick up petitions to be signed by their constituents according to the new amendments.

Adjutant Generals Office, which sanctions the competition.

Inspection will begin at 9 a. m. Saturday. As each team completes inspection it goes into the basic marching phase. The fancy marching phase starts at 1:30 p. m.

Both marching phases, an exhibition drill by the Fish Drill Team of TAMU and awards presentations will take place on the Memorial Student Center drill field.

Members of the Association of Former Fish Drill Team members will run the meet and serve as judges. Upperclassmen who will judge the competition are former national champion Fish Drill Team members.

The Association sponsors the meet in conjunction with the TAMU Commandant's Office.

Recruiting picks up

College recruiting continues ahead of the 1973 pace, according to a College Placement Council survey.

Engineering and accounting degree candidates are most sought by business and industrial employers.

They received 59 and 18 per cent, respectively, of offers reported in the CPC survey, announced Louis Van Pelt, placement director at A&M.

General business and marketing majors received 12 per cent of the remainder. Biological and physical science majors got six per cent and humanities and social science majors five per cent.

Twenty-six per cent more job offers were reported at the bachelor degree level than at the same point last year. Master's candidates offers increased two per cent, doctoral 12 per cent.

CPC surveys college recruiting on offers — not acceptances — made to students in selected curricula and graduate programs. They reflect activity during the normal recruiting period of September to June.

The March report notes there is increased competition for engineering graduates, to whom 50 per cent more job offers were made than a year ago. Chemical engineers received the highest average offers, at $1,021 a month. All engineering disciplines had five per cent or more increases.

Most active employer groups so far this season are public accounting firms followed by chemicals and petroleum groups.

ROTC seeking military

Military ROTC detachments at A&M are attempting to establish communication with people in the area who have been or are affiliated with the military services.

Contact is desired with former active duty members, Reservists, members of the National Guard and military dependents.

Their names will be placed on a special mailing list. It will be used to inform of events sponsored by the military services activities of the Corps of Cadets and other items of interest.

Interested persons are requested to write or phone the Commandant, Military Sciences Building, 845-2811. Name, address and military status or affiliation are desired.

Campus overviewed

New information center opens

Visitors at A&M can now get a quick overview of the institution's academic programs and related activities with a single stop at the new information center on the first floor of the Rudder Tower.

The new center, jointly supported by the university and the Association of Former Students, features multi-media presentations on each academic college and Corps of Cadets and a general production covering the overall institution. The TAMU story is told through a combination of color slides, movies and tape-recorded messages.

The academic college and Corps of Cadets programs are presented through a series of stations featuring rear-projected color slides with telephone-type audio outlets. Each station can accommodate three persons at one time, with the average presentation requiring eight minutes.

The production on the overall university is staged in an adjoining mini-theater with a three-screen capability.

Admissions and Records Dean Edwin H. Cooper said the information center should be of special interest and benefit to prospective students and their parents—particularly if they visit the campus on weekends when most offices are closed.

The information center has been organized administratively under Dean Cooper and will function as an Admissions Office branch from which university applications, catalogues and related materials will be distributed.

Mrs. Arla Gammon has joined the university staff to coordinate activities at the new facility. In addition to being responsible for the center's daily operation, she will also help arrange campus tours.

The center's hours of operations have not been finalized, but Dean Cooper said it will be open during peak periods on weekends as well as during regular hours on weekdays.

A formal opening for the center is planned soon, the dean added.

The concept for an information center was initiated and supported by Leslie L. Appelt of Houston, 1971 president of the Association of Former Students.

Project director was Randolph Waligura of TAMU's College of Architecture and Environmental Design.

Food Service holds workshop

As part of continuing efforts to better the Food Service Department, the assistant director of this department, Lloyd Smith, has prepared a three-day workshop for personnel.

Ranging from instructions on cleaning floors and dishes to how to garnish servings, the workshop is bringing in experts in many fields. Proctor and Gamble, Hobart and Sexton representatives demonstrated their products' uses.

The group was also instructed in fire prevention and control and first aid. "The employees really enjoyed the fire extinguisher exhibition staged in front of the main entrance to Sbsa," Smith said.

Mid-semester grades

School poked its nose into even Spring Break this year, as mid-semester grades were mailed out Monday.

The preliminary grades were turned in Friday.
