Hank Wahrhund

External affairs seat sought

Student government experience is not as important as the willingness to serve the students, said Hank Wahrhund.

Wahrhund, a senior journalism major running for Vice-President of External Affairs, has no experience with Student Government.

"I feel that I can communicate with University officials and that they will speak openly with me in return," said Wahrhund.

Wahrhund plans to work for better telephone rates for the students and for on-campus offices. He is also concerned with improved mass transit and landscaping the campus.

OPTIONAL FEES. Basically opposed to optional fees, Wahrhund cites the publicity gained by the areas supported as the justification for subsidization.

PROFESSOR EVALUATION. Wahrhund is definitely in favor of publication of these evaluations for student use. He said that he feels the university is a place to learn to communicate effectively and this is one way to do it.

SG SALARIES. "Never! I think that any person who accepts money for the job is a worthless individual," said Wahrhund. "I think that it should be voluntary."

PUNISHMENT. The establishment of a student board to consider any offenses to be punished by the university and make the final decision as to punishment is the answer to inconsistent and overly harsh punishment said Wahrhund.

ACADEMIC COUNCIL. The need of the students for an equal voice with the faculty was stressed by Wahrhund. He said that he felt the students had the right to voice their opinions since they had a vested interest.

NSL-TSL-TSA. Wahrhund suggested that TSL could be a good medium to use for getting better telephone service. He said that when A&M gets something in return for their contribution to the organization, he will support belonging to them.

John Nash

Optional fees

People who get the most good from a service should pay the most for it, said John Nash.

Nash, a junior economics major and candidate for Vice President of External Affairs, stressed that he had done extensive work with the external affairs committee this year and had attended many conferences.

OPTIONAL FEES. A totally optional fee would be the ultimate goal, said Nash, but the administration, and perhaps the students, are not ready for that step. He does favor a user fee in the meantime.

PROFESSOR EVALUATIONS. Nash said that he would like to see the professor evaluations published for student use. If the administration does not do it, then the Student Government could.

LIQUOR ON-CAMPUS. "I am definitely in favor of liquor on campus and I think that Steve Eberhard expressed it very well," said Nash.

SG SALARIES. Student Government executive officers are not in school to obtain semi-professional training and should not be paid for their work.

PUNISHMENT. "I think that it is very healthy to have the kind of input we have seen from the Senate on disciplinary matter," said Nash. He said that it would be necessary to constantly review measures for offenses as well.

"They are more like apartments and the outside world," said Nash.

ACADEMIC COUNCIL. Nash said that he feels there is a need for as much student input as possible on all university committees.

NSL-TSL-TSA. As external affairs chairman, Nash said that it would be his goal to make TSL more responsive to the student bodies of the campuses represented. He said that a student referendum like that of the NSL would help the organization to better gauge what issues should win their support.
