Positions open

Judicial Board and Student Senate positions are open for filling.

Steve Eberhard, president-elect of the Student Government, said that there is one opening in the Senate and three on the Judicial Board.

The Senate position is a seat for a graduate from the College of Agriculture. To apply for the position, the graduate student must have a GPR of at least 2.25.

YMCA officers

The Student YMCA Association has chosen its officers for the 1974-75 school year.

Roger Monk was elected president. He ran unopposed. The executive vice-president position resulted in a run-off between Barb Cowan and Keith Singleton.

The vice-presidents are Sherry LaBuda for Public Relations and Dennis Naylor for Operations.

Kissinger supports poorer countries at United Nations

By KENNETH J. FREED
Associated Press Writer

UNITED NATIONS, N. Y. (AP) —The poor and less developed nations need a greater voice in the management of the world economy, but not at the expense of industrialized countries, Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger said Monday.

"The great issues of development can no longer realistically be perceived in terms of confrontation between the haves and have-nots, nor as a struggle over the distribution of static wealth," Kissinger said in a 40-minute address to the United Nations General Assembly.

He sounded a theme of economic cooperation in an address to a special session of the General Assembly, but warned that any attempt by countries with resources to strong-arm the industrialized nations will bring disaster for everyone.

Kissinger outlined six problem areas facing the world and said they can be solved by cooperation and in the realization of global interdependence.

To support this, Kissinger pledged the United States to greater contributions in aid, science and agricultural technology, as well as promising the less developed nations a greater participation in trade and monetary planning.

But while talking of the "imperative" on cooperation, Kissinger pointedly told the less developed nations who hold raw materials, particularly oil, that the industrialized world will not accept pressure.

Any hope the developing nations have of transforming their economies "can only take place with the support of the technologically advanced countries," Kissinger said.

He warned that if those nations possessing needed raw materials try to drive up prices by artificially restricting supplies, the result will be runaway inflation that will seriously damage their own economies and virtually destroy many countries already in deep trouble.

There was a strong implication in the address that ideology must be overlooked in the interest of world economic development and Kissinger indicated the world has no fear that the United States call for cooperation is really a plan for dominance by a "condominium" of Washington and Moscow.

Kissinger's six-point program included:

—Action to insure a more equitable supply of oil and other energy products while preventing an inflationary price spiral.

—Steps to end the cycle of raw material surplus and shortage.

—Creation of a better balance between food production and population growth.

—Efforts to keep poorer nations from being destroyed by dramatic shifts in the supplies and prices of raw materials like oil.

—Greater use of science to meet the problems of unemployment and hunger in the developing nations and improved birth control technology.

—A new commitment by rich and poorer nations alike to develop an open trading system, a reformed monetary system "and a positive climate for the free flow of resources, both public and private."
