Reservoir provokes conflict

The proposed Millican Reser- gressional committee involved. voir project provoked controversy at College Station's city council meeting Tuesday.

The controversy involved the residents directly affected by the project and the city's need for a new water supply and aquatic recreation area. The council's action on the project included a proposal to send two representatives to Washington, D.C. to communicate the community's ideas on the reservoir to the proper con-

The council finally agreed to ask Congress for $375-500,000 funding for the dam. A representative from the Army Corps of Engineers was asked to attend the council's next meeting April 22 to explain the entire project as it now is set up.

Another emotional issue was the probable rise in utility rates, affecting university housing as well as all other city users.

To maintain their present profit margins, the water and electricity utility companies will be forced to raise their current rates 16.7% and 13.9%, respectively. The council postponed any action on the rate hike until Monday's scheduled meeting.

The council also set up a committee to consider what should be done with the additional revenues brought in by the hotel-motel tax. The amount in question is estimated to reach approximately $34-44,000 per year, one-sixth of which must be spent by the coun-cil to benefit the city directly.

Chinese present culture exchange

Cultural exchange is the purpose of the Chinese College Stu- tion on campus is partially redent Program which will present a free theatrical presentation tonight at 8.

Ten student from Taiwan are touring the western and southern United States in an attempt to share their culture with American college students on a personal level.

Sponsored by the Chinese Student Organization and the Human Issue Discussion Group, the group will perform on ancient Chinese instruments, sing opera, have a kung-fu presentation and show classical Chinese costumes from the six dynasties of China. They will also lead the audience in song.

After the show, free refreshments will be available in Room 701 of the Rudder Tower. After the refreshments, a 30 minute panel discussion will be held followed by individual encounter of the native Chinese students with American students.

"The idea is to bring the Free Chinese culture before American students and their communities to show that this culture is worth preserving as part of the free world heritage," said Ray Lieu, student coordinator for the event.

The 10 students who are performing are part of the twenty most outstanding university students from the thirty universities of Taiwan. "All speak English and are sponsored by the nation," Lieu said

The Chinese Student Organizasponsible for bringing the group although the Department of Education in Taiwan lists TAMU among its choices for students' extended education and planned the tour.

"We hope to spark interest in both the student body and community," Lieu said.

"Mostly we're interested in bringing culture to the students who might in turn ask for such things as a Chinese language course and in joining the student organization."

Pan-Am Week in progress

The customary Pan-American Week is in progress at A&M this week.

Sports events will take place all week with finals Wednesday through Friday.

The weekend will bring the traditional smorgasbord and folks show at the Ramada Inn Ballroom. Later that night there will be a formal dance with the presentation of the sweetheart and trophies being awarded.

The final event of the week will be the Pan-American Mass at St. Mary's Catholic Church on Sunday morning.

ENGINEERING, MATH AND PHYSICS MAJORS

The Navy has a challenging field open to second semester juniors and all seniors who are majoring in engineering, math and physics. The Navy is looking for highly-qualified officers to operate nuclear power engineering plants aboard nuclear powered submarines and surface ships. In addition, the Navy is also looking for qualified men and women to serve as instructors and research officers at one of two Nuclear Power Schools, or at the Division of Naval Reactors at Arlington, Virginia.

Each officer will receive one year of training consisting of 24 weeks at a Nuclear Power School and 26 weeks at a Nuclear Power Training Unit, a training program that is unmatched anywhere in the world. Submarine officers will also receive a 5-week course of Submarine School. Chances for additional training and post-graduate courses are excellent. The new and highly-complex Navy of today looks upon its nuclear power officers as the ones who will lead the Navy in the future. Stop and see a representative of the Officer Information Team who will be in the Memorial Student Center through April 19th from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. and the Zachry Engineering Center.
