The A&M tennis team, while awaiting a chance to prove they are meritorious of third place in the conference, team-wise, made great strides in the Southwest Conference meet Monday.

In Monday's first couple of rounds at the SWC tournament at Rice, top-seeded George Hardie of SMU and UH's Ross Walker, seeded second, advanced to the third round. But third-seeded Lee Merry of Houston was not so lucky.

Merry beat Tech's Stan Morris easily in the first round but was upset by unseeded Bill Hoover of A&M in the second round, 6-4, 6-1.

Hoover is playing his best matches of the year, in this the final week of scheduled tennis.

Senior Dan Courson also lasted two rounds, defeating Tech's

Terry Bennett, 6-3, 6-2 to start off. He beat Dan Dobbs of Baylor in the second round in a hotly contested match winning two of three tie-breakers.

Freshman Charles Emley and Junior Bill Wright were both eliminated in first round competition.

Emley lost to Rice's second seeded Alan Ross, 1-6, 6-7. Wright was defeated by Houston's Dale Ogden, 6-2, 7-6.

The top doubles team of Courson and Hoover won their match by default over Walter Hammerick and John Moffitt of Tech.

The second doubles team representing the Aggies, Emley and Wright, advanced to the second round by default when Rice's Emilio Montano came up lame and had to forfeit.

The quarterfinal and semifinal matches are being played today with finals slated for Wednesday.

The Aggies needed to beat Texas, 5-2, in the dual match on Saturday in order to tie for third in the SWC behind co-fourth-ranked Houston, who won the conference, and SMU.

The Ags began on the right foot, with Hoover beating Stewart Keller, 6-2, 6-4, and Wright knocking off Gonzalo Nunez, 6-2, 6-3 in the second and third matches, respectively.

Dan Courson, playing against Dan Nelson in the top match, finally broke serve in the 10th game to win the first set, 6-4. Nelson returned strong to take the second, 6-3, and outfooted Courson to take the third, 6-4.

In the fourth singles match Charles Emley got behind UT's Graham Whaling and lost the first set, 3-6. Emley came back strong to win the second set, 6-4, but could not hold on, losing the third, 6-4, to give the 'Horns a 2-2 tie.

Then the rains came, halting the final singles match and the doubles matches. The courts were dried after the rains ceased, but renewed storms forced postponement minutes later.

The match has been tentatively re-scheduled for Thursday at the A&M varsity courts.
