

House may reduce charges

Impeachment offenses could be cut by 30

WASHINGTON (AP)—The staff of the House Judiciary Committee is ready to recommend a sharp reduction in the number of impeachment charges it has under investigation.

As many as 30 of the 56 charges involved in the inquiry may be laid aside as unsupported by facts when the committee meets today in one of its final sessions before it starts receiving evidence.

The effect of the recommendation, if accepted by the committee, would be to narrow the inquiry to allegations involving Watergate and its aftermath, the ITT antitrust settlement, political contributions of the dairy industry, President Nixon's taxes and the activities of the White House "plumbers."

Laid aside, at least temporarily, would be charges dealing with the impoundment of funds, the dismantling of the Office of Economic Opportunity, improvements to Nixon's Key Biscayne and San Clemente properties and the use of federal agencies for political purposes.

A decision on whether to keep the secret bombing of Cambodia on the list of possible impeachable offenses is being held up pending release of a Senate Armed Services Committee transcript of hearings on the subject that includes heretofore secret documents.

Chairman Peter W. Rodino Jr., D-N. J., said no items are being eliminated from the inquiry. If evidence relating to those laid aside should turn up later, he said, they could be reactivated.

However, only those allegations the staff feels can be supported by documentary evidence will be presented to the committee when it starts receiving evidence on May 7, Rodino said.

The committee was supposed to receive a White House response today to its subpoena for tapes of 42 presidential conversations it has been seeking since Feb. 25, but Nixon asked for five additional days to reply.

Formal approval of the requested delay is expected to be granted by the committee. Both Rodino and Hutchinson agreed to it Monday when the request was made.
