

Now... ...then

FEWER CARS, more trees; fewer parking lots, more open land markedly distinguish the 1960 campus (right) from the present one (left). Aerial shots provide a distant glance at the rapid changes accomplished within 13 years. Numerous buildings and dorms, such as Keathley, Fowler, Hughes, Zachry Engineering Center and Krueger-Dunn, now stand where lawns, homes and shrubs stood less than a decade ago.

You'll never know how much good you can do until you do it.

You can help people.

In fact, there's a crying need for you. Your talents. Your training. Your concerns. They make you valuable to your business. They can make you priceless to your community.

We can put you in touch with local organizations hard at work doing things you'd be proud to be part of. Join one. Or, if you see the need, start a new one.

If you can spare even a few hours a week, call the Voluntary Action Center in your town. Or write: "Volunteer," Washington, D.C. 20013.

It'll do you good to see how much good you can do.

Government funds used in defense

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Nixon's decision to go public with edited transcripts of Watergate conversations has added thousands of dollars to the government bill for his defense against impeachment.

A precise figure could not be calculated for the additional cost, but the White House received the first 2,000 copies of the Government Printing Office's press run of the document the GPO is selling to the public for $12.25 a piece.

The White House will be billed by the GPO for the 2,000 copies, but the total was not disclosed.

Many of the 16 lawyers in the office of Nixon's counsel were involved in preparation of the transcripts, along with a number of secretaries and other White House and government employees.

The White House has defended the use of government funds to pay for Nixon's response to impeachment moves by contending that the larger staffs of the special prosecutor's office and the House Judiciary Committee also are financed by the federal government.
