Unsafe cribs may be fatal

New rules, old tips cited for safe sleeping

Unsafe cribs account for 150-200 infant deaths and 40,000 injuries every year, says Patricia Bradshaw, housing and home furnishings specialist, A&M Agricultural Extension Service.

"To insure that new cribs will be designed and built more safely, the U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission has developed a new regulation," Miss Bradshaw said.

She cited some of the upcoming crib features that will meet new standards:

—Slats will be placed closer together so babies can't slip through and strangle.

—Metal hardware and edges of the crib frame will be free of sharp or rough edges.

—Locks and latches on the drop side will be safe—and secure against accidental release by the baby.

—A warning on the crib carton, assembly instructions and headboard will advise only use of a mattress that fits the crib snugly. This prevents babies from getting caught between the crib and mattress.

If you already have a crib, or are fixing a used or antique one, Miss Bradshaw suggests the following guidelines:

Check the overall condition of the crib. Is anything missing? Be sure all slots and bolts of the fasteners are in place or can be replaced.

Repaint or refinish a crib only with paint or finishes labeled non-toxic.

If the mattress does not fit snugly, replace it or roll up large bath towels and place them between the mattress and crib for a tight fit. Make sure the baby cannot get wedged between the mattress and crib.

Purchase or make bumper pads for older cribs with slats far apart. Slats more than two and three-eighths inches apart are unsafe. Make sure the bumpers fit around the entire crib. Tie or strap them into place and have at least six straps. Make sure the baby cannot chew on the straps. Use the bumpers until the baby can pull himself to a standing position.

The specialist also suggested some crib safety practices.

"Set the mattress at its lowest position as soon as your child can pull himself to a standing position. Don't leave any toys or other articles in the crib that your child might use to help himself out.

"Don't keep your child in the crib once the height of the side rail is less than three-fourths of the child's height. Replace any damaged teething rails. They can cut the child's mouth.

"The crib should not be used as a playpen. If you put crib extenders on the crib's side rails, they should not make the side rails taller than the end panels of the crib. The extenders should have no easily removable nuts or bolts and their slats should be narrowly spaced.

"Remember, these are only precautions. Children are ingenious, so there is no substitute for close parental supervision," the specialist warned.

White plans campaign for voting

AUSTIN, Tex.—Secretary of State Mark White, Jr., disturbed over low voter participation in recent elections, is planning a massive, coordinated get-out-the-vote campaign for the general election.

White indicated he will seek to harmonize efforts of business, labor organizations, educational groups, the news media and lobbying interests to improve the turnout.

As chief Texas election officer, White is studying election systems used in other states, and he has outlined preliminary plans for a bipartisan fall drive to stir the voters to action.

Only 30 per cent of eligible Texans took part in the May 4 primaries, and far fewer voted in the June 1 runoff.

White hopes to get a new registration push going and to encourage businesses to devote part of their promotional budgets to "innovative" get-out-the-vote appeals. Labor, which traditionally conducts its own campaigns to get union members to the polls, will also be asked to join in the overall effort.

"People must be made aware of the danger of ignoring the political system," said White.
