Puerto Ricans, police clash

NEWARK, N.J. (AP)—Hundreds of predominantly Puerto Rican demonstrators, who were protesting police actions, hurled stones at City Hall and smashed storefront windows Monday in a second day of disorders.

After meeting with two groups of community leaders, Mayor Kenneth Gibson asked Newark's 400,000 residents Monday night to "voluntarily stay indoors until further notice."

During the meetings, police made two forays into the city's main street to disperse demonstrators, numbering up to 1,000 persons. The protesters said they were angered by police arrests and handing of disorders at a Puerto Rican festival on Sunday. The protesters complained excessive force had been used by police at the disorders.

Some protesters demanded the ouster of Police Director Hubert Williams, whom Gibson appointed to the post several months ago.

Monday's trouble came on the heels of a demonstration by about 2,000 persons Sunday night over disorders at a picnic in Branch Brook Park.

Two men were shot at the Sunday festival; a 4-year-old girl was trampled by a policeman's horse; and several others were hit by flying rocks and bottles. Two police cars, a fire department car and a motorcycle were burned.

Authorities didn't say what caused the disturbance or who fired the shots, but some police reports indicated the crowd's anger stemmed from gambling arrests at the picnic.

Council extends 'Q' drop period

The Academic council lengthened Q grade drop time in Thursday's meeting.

Formerly, the student desiring to drop a course had to do so by the 20th day of class to receive a mark of Q. This symbol indicates a drop without penalty. Any drops after this time were indicated as P or F, dropped with a passing grade or dropped with a failing grade.

Under the new rule, a student can drop his course, regardless of grade, with a Q up until mid-term. He must have the approval of his academic dean. Thereafter, he may drop the course only with a Q if he is passing the course. A grade of F will be recorded if dropped with less than a "C" average.

An amendment was added to the bylaws of the council to place H. Kell Monroe as dean of faculties.

Frank Wardlaw became director of the TAMU Press.

Cadets begin auditions

Auditions for the Singing Cadets are scheduled for the first two weeks of the fall semester.

Robert L. Boone, director of men's chorus, will conduct tryouts by appointment. Tryouts will be held in the new Singing Cadet rehearsal facility, Memorial Student Center. Mrs. June Biering, accompanist, will assist Boone.

"We're looking for the young men who loves to sing and perform," Boone said. "Prior experience is helpful but not required. The student who feels he would enjoy representing TAMU before various public occasions should come by for an audition."

Auditions can be arranged by calling 845-6942, or seeing the Singing Cadets secretary in the office area of the MSC bowling-billiard area.

New profs arrive

The U. S. Air Force has assigned five new members to the instructor detachment at TAMU.

Four officers and a sergeant major join with 18 others in teaching aerospace studies and administration of the four-year AFROTC program that leads to Air Force reserve commissions.

Maj. Joe Bergstad, Maj. James McCleskey, Maj. Brian Parker and Maj. Richard Descheneaux began working Monday with TAMU cadets, announced Col. Robert E. Kins, Detachment 805 commander.

SM Sgt. Fred Pipkins became the Aerospace Studies Department's new sergeant major.

The quintet has a combined 70 years military service. Sgt. Pipkins with 20, came to TAMU from Pacific Air Force headquarters at Hickam AFB, Hawaii. His home of record is Bald Knob, Ark.

Maj. Bergstad, from Astoria, Ore., became sophomore division chief of the A&M detachment. A senior pilot and Oregon State graduate, he was last assigned to Military Airlift Command headquarters, Scott AFB, Ill.

Maj. Parker and Maj. McCleskey are senior division instructors. Both are Air Force Academy graduates. Maj. Parker in 1959, Maj. McCleskey, 1961. Parker most recently was navigation training branch chief of the Academy.

Maj. McCleskey recently completed the Air Command and Staff College at Maxwell AFB, Ala. He simultaneously completed the M.B.A. at Auburn. Also a senior pilot, he is from Marietta, Ga.

Lowell Tech graduate Maj. Descheneaux flew with an Air Force headquarters detachment at Yokota, Japan, on his last assignment. Like the other four men, he served in Vietnam. Descheneaux is formerly of Lowell, Mass.
