

Another 3-2 score

Oakland wins third straight series

(AP) — Joe Rudi's seventh-inning home run broke a tie and gave the Oakland A's a 3-2 victory over the Los Angeles Dodgers and their third straight World Series championship Thursday night.

The A's took the Series four games to one and in four of the five games the final score was 3-2.

The A's took the early lead, scoring single runs in the first two innings and again following the Series-long pattern of taking advantage of Los Angeles mistakes.

In the first, Bert Campaneris opened with a single against Sutton. North forced Campy and on the first pitch to Sal Bando, North took off for second.

The American League base stealing leader with 54 during the regular season, beat Yeager's throw easily and when the ball skipped into center field, North raced to third.

It was the sixth Dodger error of the five-game Series and, a moment later, Bando made Los Angeles pay for it with a sacrifice fly.

It was hardly an unusual accomplishment for the A's captain, who led the American League with 13 sacrifice flies during the regular season.

Fosse led off the second inning and sent Sutton's one-strike pitch deep into the lower left field seats for a home run, making the score 2-0.

Vida Blue protected that 2-0 lead until the sixth but the Dodgers suddenly came alive and scored two runs to tie the game.

Pinch-hitter Tom Paciorek, batting for Sutton, started the rally with a double. After Davey Lopes walked, Buckner sacrificed the runners to second and third.

Jimmy Wynn's sacrifice fly scored Paciorek and, a moment later, Steve Garvey's single tied the score. It was the eighth hit of the Series for Garvey — most by any player on either team.

In the seventh, Blue retired the first two batters but then walked Yeager. When the first two pitches to Marshall were out of the strike zone, Manager Alvin Dark lifted his starter and brought in Odom.

Blue stomped angrily off the mound and into the dugout without waiting for Odom to reach the mound. The reliever completed the walk to Marshall, but got out of the inning by getting Lopes on a force play.

As the Dodgers took the field and the A's came to bat in the bottom of the seventh, the fans in left field began pelting Buckner with debris in a scene reminiscent of the 1972 Series when they did the same thing to Cincinnati left fielder Pete Rose. Buckner came in toward the infield and — after a conference between the umpires and Dodger Manager Walter Alston and a few Los Angeles players — Buckner returned to his post.

Marshall had waited patiently during the delay. Finally he went to work on Rudi.

The first pitch was a mistake and Rudi sent it rocketing into the left field seats. It landed in the same sector that Fosse's shot had five innings earlier and the A's had the one run they needed to win the game and the 71st World Series.

Now that he was in front, Dark wasted no time.

He reached for Fingers, the ace of his bullpen, to start the eighth inning.

Bill Buckner opened the Dodgers' eighth with a single to and when the ball skipped past center fielder Bill North for an error, Buckner raced to second.

He should have stopped right there but he never looked at the right fielder Reggie Jackson, who ran the ball down.

Jackson relayed to Green, whose pinpoint throw to third baseman Sal

Bando caught Buckner in a close play.

Fingers got Garvey and Ferguson on fly balls to end the eighth and set down Ron Cey, Willie Crawford pinch-hitter Von Joshua in order in the ninth.

Fingers, the Series most valuable player, made the final throw of the Series himself, picking up Yeager's roller just off the mound and tossing to Gene Tenace to end it.
