

$50,000 allocated

By MARY RUSSO Staff Writer

Distribution of the $50,000 in bookstore profits was approved early this week by the President's Office.

The money was allocated by the Student Organizations Board (SOB) by looking at this year's requests, last year's allocations and the subjective determination of eight organizational council advisers, counseled by their students.

Several organizations which represent A&M as a whole (Aggie band, debate team, Singing Cadets) and which cannot charge enough dues to support their activities were administratively funded, Carolyn Adair, SOB chairman and student organization's director, said.

The members of the SOB, whose other duty is recognition of campus organizations, are: Col. T. Parsons, Corps adviser; Dennis Corrington, intercollegiate club sport adviser;

Ron Blatchley, recreational club sport adviser; Dr. Charles McCandless, academic honoraries adviser; Charles Hornstein, international club adviser; Karen Switzer, hometown club adviser; Warren Faulkner, general adviser; Tobie Rives, service and honorary club adviser; and student members, Curt Marsh, Jeff Dunn and Barry Brooks.

The money was first split among categories. The advisers took the money to the student representatives on their councils where it was further divided. The total requested was $160,000.

The SOB was much quicker in allotting the money than last year's Bookstore Allocation Committee. The money wasn't available until spring last year.

To enable the profits to be ready for the organizations in September, rather than November, the SOB will allocate the money in the spring.

Request forms will be available March 24, with a month allowed to draw up a budget and turn in the forms.
