

P&Z rejects 5-acre plot re-zone plan

By JACK HODGES Staff Writer
The Planning and Zoning Commission rejected a proposal to re-zone a five-acre plot across from K-Mart on Highway 6 in the Lakeview Acres area.
The owner, Isadore L. Krenek, asked to re-zone the land from residential to commercial because she said the city has not built adequate sewage for the mobile home trailer park which he owns. The area is also well located for commercial use due to the movement of the city in that direction, Krenek said.

The five-acre area is too small for a large commercial plot and too large for a small one, said Tom Chaney, commission member.
Concern over spot zoning because the surrounding area is residential was also expressed.
"There would not be continuity if we approved the five acres to be commercial and it would be contrary to our zoning plans," said M. R. Callihan, another member of the commission.
Callihan suggested that if all of the residents in the area would consolidate their efforts to change the area to commercial, a re-zoning would be recommended.

The commission agreed with Krenek that the area is excellent for a commercial tract.
"We will try to get the residents of the area to agree to have their land re-zoned, but I don't like to tell the people to change their land to commercial so that we can sell our land," Mrs. Krenek said.
In other business the commission advised a landowner, Joe Osoba, to have 30 acres between Hardy Gardens and Chapman's, a decorating center, platted before a building permit could be issued.

When land is platted a specific boundary must be presented along with prospective development plans. There must be contoured drawings of the land to judge water and sewer drainage, the commission said.

Stage production brings life to Shakespeare's Henry IV

A Shakespearean gallery of memorable characters and album of famous scenes come alive Wednesday at TAMU.
The National Players will produce "King Henry IV, Part I."
The play will begin at 8 p.m., in the Rudder Center Auditorium. It is sponsored by the Memorial Student Center Arts Committee.
A comedy and heroic tale of adventure combined, "Henry IV, Part I" has been consistently repeated since Shakespeare's time.

Characters that shine through the shadow cast by Falstaff are Hal, Hotspur, Dame Quickly, Glendower, Poins and the King. They enjoy a share of the spotlight as they make their way from the Boar's Head Tavern to Shrewsbury Field. There Hal and Hotspur fight. Falstaff adroitly avoids combat and delivers his sentiments on honor.
A regular before TAMU audiences, the National Players touring repertory company is notable for high quality productions. The company is in its 26th tour. Earlier companies have played in 40 states, Korea, France, Germany, Austria and inside the Arctic Circle.

Arts Committee Chairperson Kathy Rodenberger said tickets are on sale at the Rudder Center Box Office. Reservations may be phoned to 845-2916.
A saving is available by purchases in blocks of 10 or more tickets.

Board fills committee posts

By JAMES SULLIVAN Staff Writer
The SG Executive Board filled committee positions by unanimous vote Monday night.
Aggie Muster committee chairman this year is Larry Teverbaugh, junior senator from the College of Engineering. Mary Russo, student vice president of the Resident Housing Association, was selected information director. The Welfare Benefits Committee will be headed by Jim Cornell, member of Alpha Phi Omega Service Fraternity.
The welfare benefits coordinator works with the student vice president of finance in administering Campus Chest loans, allocations and gifts. He also handles A&M's account with Wadley Central Blood Bank of Dallas, where the blood from the Aggie Blood Drive is deposited.

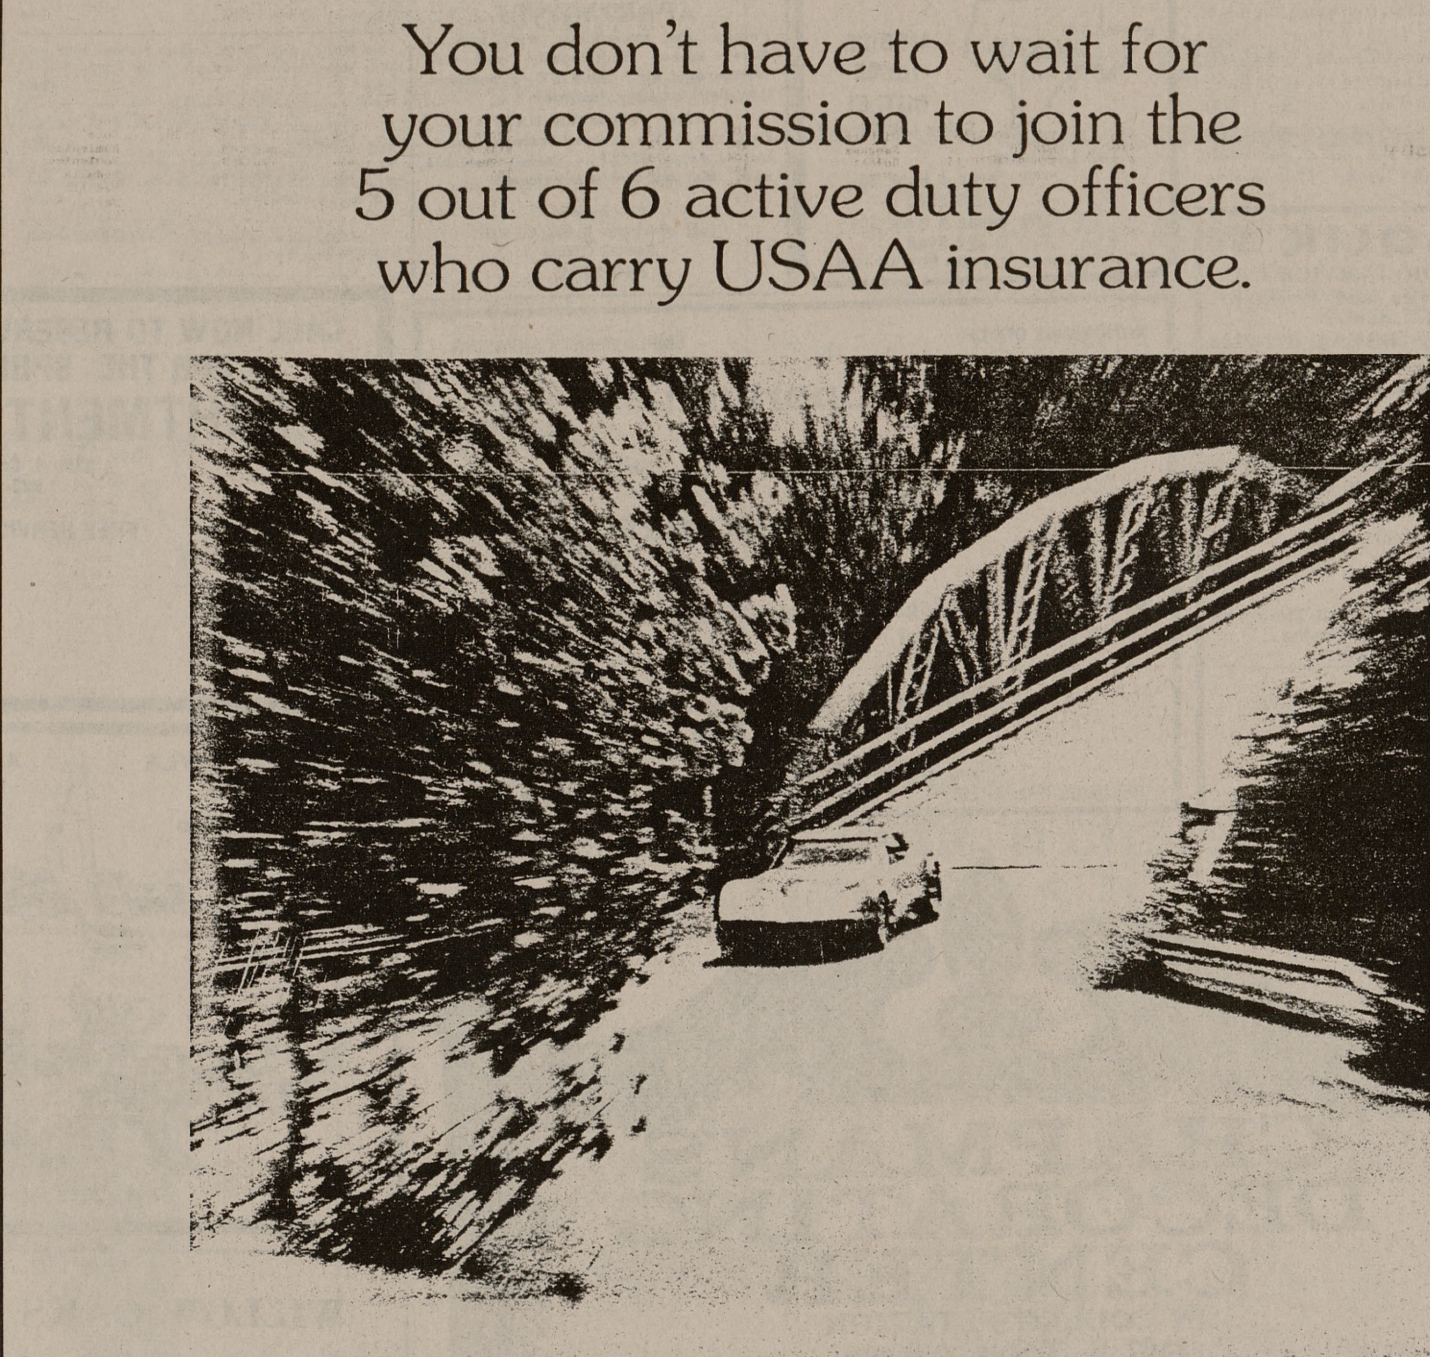

Science, will be working on the Student Book Exchange with Curt Marsh, student vice president of finance.
Bob Schultz of the Athletic Counseling Service spoke to the Executive Board on distribution of student tickets for the upcoming basketball season. Schultz wants to develop an alternate plan of distributing tickets besides the present seniority system in case of a sellout game. Solving attendance problems with closed circuit TV was discussed, but viewed as too expensive.
In other business, Barry Brooks, student vice president of Student Services, discussed means of raising funds for bicycle racks. Apparently, the only way to produce sufficient funds to purchase the $36-a-space racks is to combine the Bicycle Fund with the Motorcycle Fund. Brooks intends to co-sponsor a resolution with Mary Martin, sophomore senator from the College of Education, that would combine the funds.

Professor evaluations will be handed out this Monday, Dec. 2, to next Friday, Dec. 13. Only 300 level courses will be evaluated this year, says Jeff Dunn, student vice president for Academic Affairs. Anyone interested in helping to process and hand out the evaluations should contact the Student Government Office, 845-3051.

Alison King, freshman in the College of Science, will be taking charge of refrigerator rentals, and Kay Zenner, junior in the College of

Mills called arrogant

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — Judy Petty of Little Rock, the Republican candidate who unsuccessfully opposed Rep. Wilbur D. Mills, D-Ark., in the Nov. 5 general election, said Monday that Mills had shown "an incredible degree of arrogance and disregard for the people of Arkansas."
Mrs. Petty made the statement in light of the latest incident involving Mills and stripper Annabel Battistella. Mills appeared on stage Saturday night at Boston with Mrs. Battistella, 38, who performs under the stage name Fanne Foxe. He told newsmen at the time that he had written a film for Mrs. Battistella, but he said Monday he was joking with newsmen.
Mills was also quoted as saying, "This won't ruin me. Nothing can ruin me."
