Special to the Batt In November of 1921, a small group of Aggies broadcast the first football game on radio. Texas A&M College was one of the first schools in Texas to have its own campus radio station

Yet, more than 50 years later, Texas A&M University is one of a small group of Texas universities without campus radio stations.

This seeming contradiction came about 17 years ago when the Texas A&M, a third generation descendant of the original campus station.

The reasons given at the time for selling the station was that A&M lawyers feared a new federal tax regulation would cause the state to pay taxes on the station.

So, A&M has gone without a campus radio station for 17 years, but that may be corrected in the

A&M may get another campus radio station. The catch is, how.

Radio stations don't come cheap. In 1957 WTAW sold for $32,257. including its six-month-old allautomatic equipment. One must keep in mind that WTAW was a comparatively small, daytime broadcast. AM station with a low power transmitter.

sidered to be the most expensive piece of radio gear. The Texas A&M Student Government has been working with a radio station that saves transmitter costs.

How? Simple, no transmitter. Student government has been experimenting with TAMU Radio 107.5 FM. The station was set up in September of last year as an interim project until the Senate decides to pay the $10,000-plus for a transmit-Student Radio gets around the transmitter costs by being "fed" directly into Midwest Video cable lines. The signals originate in a small studio in the back of the Ridgecrest Barbershop. The barbershop is next door to Midwest Video on Highway 6.

The studio is modestly furnished. Egg crates, donated from the Sbisa dining hall refuse wagons line the walls, serving as sound buffers. Two small turntables set on the far leg of the horseshoe shaped desk.

'The set up that we've got is basically an overgrown stereo," says

didn't have financial backing, he replied, "If I had another means of support, sure . . . Would I do it if I were a regular student, working my way through school? I don't know. The only regularly paid person at Student Radio is station manager Jim James. James says he gets $25 a week and usually puts in about 50 to 60 hours a week

James says his duties encompass everything from selling advertisements to making sure someone is at the station all the time. He also is working with the student government radio governing board on going open air. James is head staff member and says, "There are so many good people working here, that if I see I can't do something, one of them can. We have got about the finest staff of people you will find anywhere.'

A radio station is only as successful as its audience is receptive and one of Student Radio's newer DJ's, Andy Kring, said he got 12 requests and gave away a free album in two hours one night. James contrasted this with KTRU in Houston, Rice University's open air station. James visited KTRU rejockeys are volunteers. Kirchner's cently and in the hour-and-a-half he was there, only one request was cal-elderly Texans are on a "goose" or victims list used by unscrupulous insurance salesmen in South Texas, the head of a State Insurance Board task force said Tuesday. Hector DeLeon said at a news conference he could not say for sure how widespread the use of such lists

What the lists actually show, he said, are the dates on which hospitalization policies carried by certain old people - usually between 75 and 85 — expire.

The gimmick, he said, is to sell these people one-year policies, changing the company each year. A salesman's commission is 80 percent in a policy's first year, so it is to his advantage to switch a customer's company every year Agents who use this scheme usually fast talk their customers into signing their names on the application forms, DeLeon said. Then the agent fills out the rest, portraying the client as an excellent health risk. But when the policyholder goes to the hospital, the insurance company learns of pre-existing ailments and refuses to pay under a standard policy clause, DeLeon said. Insurance commissioner Don

Retail sales drop slightly

WASHINGTON (AP) - The government reported Tuesday that retail sales dropped last month by 1 percent, despite the approach of the busy holiday shopping season.

The Commerce Department

computed total retail sales for November at an annual rate of $47.1 billion after adjustment for seasonal

The biggest drop came in the durable-goods category, which in-cludes automobiles and home appliances. Sales of durable goods totaled $13.3 billion, a 3 percent reduction from October and a 6 percent drop from November a year
