

Governor's inauguration hosts Ross Volunteers

The state's oldest student organization went to Austin today for its part in the inauguration. A&M's Ross Volunteers participated in the inauguration of Gov. Dolph Briscoe and Lt. Gov. William P. Hobby. The white-clad RVs were the governor's official honor guard. They formed a sabre arch from the south entrance of the Capitol to the speaker's stand for the high noon ceremony. Commander Less Harvey of Houston and 45 members of the elite honor military unit also flanked the speaker's stand during the program. The inauguration was followed by a reception in the Capitol rotunda. Ross Volunteers Advisor John Adams said only part of the company participated. The ceremony starts a busy period for the company composed of Cadet Corps seniors and juniors. The RVs will be in New Orleans for Mardi Gras Feb. 9-12 and marches in Conroe's "Go Texan" parade Feb. 15.

The company was first formed in 1887, as the Scott Volunteers, after the college business manager. It became known as the Ross Volunteers in the first year of the TAMC presidency of Gen. Lawrence Sullivan Ross, in 1890-91.

The company became the Foster Volunteers after Ross died, but resumed the name on suggestion of President H. H. Harrington in 1902.

More than a dozen Texas governors have walked through the Ross Volunteers' sabre arch to formally become the state's top elected official.
