

Campus briefs

Dinosaur flick

The Association of Baptist Students will present the documentary film, "Footprints In Time," at 6:30 p.m. February 4. The presentation will be in the All Faiths Chapel. The documentary will feature the finding of human footprints mixed with those of dinosaurs.

Shorter SPO hours

Hours of the Student Programs Office have been formalized recently. All users of the SPO must be out by 10 p.m., unless special permission has been obtained from Col. Hal Gaines. Other areas connected with the Programs office will close at 5 p.m.

'Quartet' out

"Quartet," a literary magazine edited by TAMU English professor Richard Costa, should be ready for circulation in early February. This edition will feature the New Journalism and New Fiction. Also included will be etchings by David Itchkawich. The Magazine publishes quarterly with a yearly double issue.

Fire info

Information is currently available in room 1123 of the Chemistry Bldg. about grant funds from the Center for Fire Research. The fire research program will include basic and applied fire research for the purpose of understanding all aspects of fire.

Snake oil, anyone?

A five-part seminar on "Introduction to Medicine for Bioengineers" is being presented Mondays at 4 p.m. in room 104A of the Zachry Engineering Center.

Dr. Andrzej Adamski of the Bioengineering Program is presenting the clinical medicine lectures.

The subject to be presented Monday is "Heart Conductive System Diseases." Arrhythmias and heart blocks will be primarily discussed.

Dr. Adamski, an orthopedic surgeon, is head of the Experimental Surgery Lab in the Bioengineering Program. He is also a post-doctoral fellow in rehabilitation within the Department of Physical Medicine at Baylor College of Medicine.

... or dirty air?

Scientists, engineers, and technicians concerned with air pollution will meet at TAMU next month.

The three day short course entitled "Urban Climates and Air Pollution with Implications for Planning," will begin on February 19.

The course is for scientists, engineers and technicians needing a review of the fundamentals of air pollution meteorology. It is also planned to encompass the needs of others concerned with the urban environment.

The guest lecturer for the conference is Dr. W. P. Lowry, professor of geography and environmental studies at the University of Illinois.

Let's play house

The Sociology Department is in need of girls to participate in the "Marriage Game."

The game is based on marriage without the emotion attached. The project is completely voluntary and is open to anyone interested in the trials and tribulations of marriage.

The game is offered on Tuesday and Wednesday at 3:30 and only one day attendance a week is necessary. All interested girls should call Dr. Kutach or Al Moran in the Sociology Department.

... or ski Aspen

The TAMU Ski Club is planning a trip to Aspen, Colorado, on March 14. Those interested in going should meet tonight at 7:30 p.m. in room 232 of G. Rollie White. Deposits will be accepted at this meeting.

Fellowships offered

Fellowships to study at two state universities are being offered to students interested in public administration. The program involves a ten-week internship in a government agency in the South and studying at the University of Alabama and either the University of Tennessee or the University of Kentucky.

Fellowships for single fellows total $4600, a cash stipend of $3300 and $1300 for fees and tuition. Married students receive an additional $400.

Candidates must be American citizens completing a B.A. in a recognized major by June 1975. For information write: COLEMAN B. RANSOME, JR., EDUCATIONAL DIRECTOR, SOUTHERN REGIONAL TRAINING PROGRAM IN PUBLIC ADMINISTRATION, DRAWER I, UNIVERSITY, ALABAMA, 35486.

Briscoe offers up budget

$1 billion under legislature idea

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Dolph Briscoe recommended an $11.6 billion budget to the 64th Legislature Wednesday saying it would leave about $1.1 billion to be used for public school finance reform and emergencies.

Later, Briscoe's office said the governor was sticking with his prediction made earlier in the week that his budget, plus his public school financing program and other emergency request, would still leave about $60 million unspent at the end of the 1976-77 two-year business period.

A gubernatorial spokesman said the public school financing program would require about $1 billion more over 1976-77 than is now being spent to support Texas public schools.

Briscoe's two-year budget of $11.6 billion from all sources, including federal grants, includes general revenue fund expenditures of $3 billion, an increase of $902.8 million over the current level of spending.

The governor's budget is almost $1 billion less than the budget recommended by the Legislative Budget Board, a full time Senate-House finance study group.

The budget board's document is normally the basic appropriations bill used in both the Senate and House and from this each house develops its own state spending bill for debate.

The final 1976-77 general appropriations bill will be written, or at least revised, by a 10-member conference committee of five senators and five representatives, subject to item vetoes by the governor. The governor cannot veto the entire bill.

The budget board bill calls for $12.5 billion in total spending from all sources. The board said its bill would fit within the state's pay-as-you-go policy, but did not include new expenditures for public school financing and other emergencies.

The 1974-75 estimated expenditures total $9.7 million from all sources and $2 million from general revenue.

Some of the highlights of Briscoe's budget included:

— A 6.8 percent annual salary increase from state employees, over and above the emergency salary raises. The budget board recommended an average 24 percent raise for the two years.

— $39.3 million for new "alternate care" services for the mentally ill and mentally retarded, plus $51.2 million more for institutional care of the mentally retarded, a 46 percent increase.

— $1.8 million increase for establishment of four additional public health regions to complete the regional health care system of the State Health Department.

— $20.5 million more the next two years for day care benefits in an effort to get employment for more recipients of Aid to Families with Dependent Children AFDC.

— $12 million increase for services for abused and neglected children.
