Call up Moses

Tom McCall has a job for him

By ROXIE HEARN
Staff Writer
An amendment to an age-old commandment was offered Monday night by Tom McCall, former governor of Oregon: "Treat thy neighbor and thy world, as thyself."

He urged state-wide land use planning in his Political Forum appearance.

Citing Vermont, Florida, Oregon and Washington as exemplary in the area of environmental improvement, he said, "It'll only be a matter of time before other areas will be emptying all their people into our states."

To avoid this, he urged Texas, "Try to clean your own house."

"The question is not 'will the people need to sacrifice?' but rather, 'what will the people need to sacrifice?'"

McCall, who served Oregon's maximum number of successive terms as governor, discussed a "third force" movement in the American two-party system.

"I believe in the two-party system," he said, "but my question is,

why these two parties?"

Describing himself as an "independent Republican," McCall said, "I feel the Republicans are in the lifeboat, not on the ship."

He condemned the recent no-discussion defeat of an environmental bill in the House, even though he considered the bill inadequate.

"Quite simply it said if a state wants to work out a plan, the federal government will give it some money. If it stops, the government will stop giving it money. The weakest bill you ever saw," he said.

He suggested a continuation of efforts by volunteer groups. "If there's an issue that transcends all boundaries, it's the environment," he said. "It just takes the patience of Job and the wisdom of Moses."
