He must be doing something right.

Any man who has earned the Diamond Medallion must be doing something right. So right that it puts him in a class by himself. This designation, which goes to only a very few young Provident Mutual agents each year, reflects fine service to clients and an excellent grasp of life and health insurance counseling. Like all coveted honors, the Diamond Medallion is not easy to come by.

Les's agency, his clients, and his Company congratulate him on a job well done.

Attorney General Saxbe succeeded by scholar

WASHINGTON (AP) — Edward H. Levi, a legal scholar and university president who has isolated himself from political parties for 30 years, was confirmed by the Senate on Wednesday as the nation's 71st attorney general.

The Senate approved President Ford's nomination of Levi by a voice vote without dissent.

The 63-year-old president of the University of Chicago succeeds William B. Saxbe, who was sworn in Monday as ambassador to India. Levi probably will be sworn into office in a ceremony Friday at the White House, Justice Department officials said.

Despite initial dismay from some conservative senators, Ford's first Cabinet nominee encountered no serious opposition during three days of Senate Judiciary Committee hearings. As Sen. Strom Thurmond, R.S.C., put it: "I've been investigating you, and the more I investigate, the better you look."

During the hearings, liberal senators pressed Levi for his positions on enforcing antitrust laws against business monopolies and price-fixing practices, the death penalty, gun control laws, as well as FBI wiretapping and surveillance practices.

On many questions, Levi refused to give firm commitments about the policies he will follow as head of the Justice Department.

Summer jobs scarce for foreign students

It's getting tougher for foreign students to get summer work in this country while they are in school, according to a report by the Intercollegiate Press Bureau (IPB).

The Immigration and Naturalization Service began last summer enforcing a tougher policy regarding summer work permits. Fears brought on by rising unemployment prompted the crackdown on foreign student workers in the United States.

Prior to last summer, foreign student advisers on each campus could use their discretion about foreign applicants for work permits. Now only the INS can grant such permits, the IPB report says.

Foreign students caught working without the permit are notified that they must leave the country.

Forrest Moore, director of the International Student Affairs Office at the University of Minnesota, calls the INS "the prosecutor, judge and jury" in these cases, but the student can appeal a decision. This usually brings about a postponement which allows the student to complete the current school year, but often means returning home without the degree he came to get.

Oil affects Chile coast six months after spill

After six months, the effects of the world's second largest oil spill are still felt on the environment of the Straits of Magellan.

Dr. Roy Hann, head of the TAMU environmental engineering division, has just returned from a trip to the area. He said the spill missed the "Los Pingüinos" National Park which serves as a major nesting ground for tens of thousands of penguins.

The supertanker "Metula" went aground Aug. 9, 1974, and much of the 51,500 tons of crude oil and an undetermined amount of Bunker-C fuel which was spilled has washed ashore on 75 to 100 miles of shore line.

This was the first time a supertanker of the Very Large Crude Carrier (VLCC) class had run aground. The ship now sits near Rio de Janeiro awaiting a decision to repair or scrap it.

"Oil remains on the Strait of Magellan beaches long after the hulk of the 'Metula' has gone," said Hann. "Limpets, juvenile mussels, and small crustaceans and other organisms that are in the region have disappeared from the oiled beaches."

"The effects of this spill will still be observable in five to ten years," he predicted. "We found pools of oil 6 to 8 inches deep were observed in estuary channels up to a mile inland. Oil has seeped into beaches to a depth of a foot and covered intertidal areas from a few feet in width to about one-third mile with an asphalt like coating. This so-called Muescrete causes the broad tidal flats to look like an airport parking apron."

Hann noted that the Delaware and Mississippi River oil spills over the weekend show that major spills of the magnitude of the Chile spill are still possible in the U.S.

"Many of the supertankers produced immediately after the closing of the Suez Canal in 1967 are nearing the end of their design life," he
