Expert on foreign issues to discuss world planning

The head of the Overseas Development Council, James P. Grant, will speak to SCONA XX delegates at 10:40 a.m. Thursday. The talk, "International Resource Allocation in the Future," will be in the Rudder Center.

The Overseas Development Council is a non-profit center for study, research, analysis and education and Grant has been its president and chief executive officer since its establishment in 1969. Grant brought the organization about 20 years experience with economic development issues in Asia and the Middle East. Before his appointment to the Council, Grant was an assistant administrator for the Agency for International Development (AID). He directed the AID program in Turkey from 1964 to 1967.

From 1962 to 1964 Grant had the title Deputy Assistant Secretary of State for Near East and South Asian Affairs. Previous to that assignment he served as deputy to the director of AID's predecessor, the International Cooperation Administration and organized programming and planning.

Grant has also worked in Ceylon, China and India and currently resides in Washington, D.C.

Ferkiss to discuss government change

Dr. Victor C. Ferkiss brings a specialty in futuristics to the 20th Student Conference on National Affairs.

A professor at Georgetown University, Ferkiss has appeared before Congress to discuss policy formulation through application of futuristic methodology.

His SCONA XX topic will be "The Future of Government: Evolution of Federalism." Dr. Ferkiss will speak at 10:30 a.m. Friday, at 10:30 a.m. Friday.

Victor Ferkiss

Areas Ferkiss can be expected to cover are government's possible future role at all societal levels, concentration and centralization of government and possible changes in attitude toward government.

The future of government segment of SCONA XX may also bring out discussion of other areas: Will policy formulation use computer simulation techniques? Does protest politics have a future? Will traditional parties give way to something else? Will tools for consensus decision-making be created? Are alternatives to America's present constitutional form of government going to be necessary?

Ferkiss teaches government at the Washington, D. C., university. He has books on foreign aid, Africa's search for identity, technological man and the future of technological civilization. His Congressional testimony included ways government should evolve to meet the needs of people.

The 49-year-old professor has degrees from California, Yale and Chicago, with his Ph. D. in political science awarded in 1954.

Ferkiss was a Peace Corps consultant on African programs, and has taught in Trinidad and British Columbia plus a number of U. S. institutions.
