

Woman director wants quality

Though Mrs. Wilmer Smith is accustomed to receiving honors for her activities, she was surprised when Gov. Briscoe named her to be on the Board of Directors of the TAMU system in 1973.

She was on the Committee for Outlying Academic Campuses but being elevated to the Board of Directors left her "disturbed but honored."

In addition she served on the Century Council where she suggested that women be allowed on campus.

Being a member of the Board has been very rewarding, said Smith, but when she first attended a meeting of the Building Committee, "They got far too technical."

In the future Smith would like to see, along with increased enrollment, an increase in the quality of education. She'd also appreciate the completion of construction going on all over campus.

She justified the construction of the campus perimeter as a means of giving the campus a feeling of unity.

Smith says the changes at A&M are for the better. She noticed that students have become more expressive of their views. "I see a lot of letters in the Battalion. That's fine. I don't object to students expressing their views, but sometimes they border on extreme negativity," says Smith.

She has been closely associated with Texas Tech University. Her daughter and grandchildren have graduated from Tech and her husband was president of Tech's Exe's Association. Thus whenever there is a game between Tech and A&M she feels "rather torn."

"I try to support the better team," she says, "and A&M has won the last two Tech-A&M games I saw."

Smith was born Lola Wheeler near Lubbock. A 1939 graduate of Texas Tech University, she has taught school in Cooper and New Home School districts.

She has also served on several national and international committees on homemaking and consumer affairs.

Once called Judas

Reynolds - 'limit growth'

Joe Reynolds, Houston lawyer, is thought to be a modern day Judas by a former Baylor classmate.

Reynolds graduated from Baylor Law School in 1947. He has been on the A&M Board of Directors for three years.

At the Baylor-A&M football game, a classmate gave him 30 pieces of silver and called him

Judas, Reynolds said in a recent telephone interview.

During the interview, Reynolds said A&M's tremendous growth may become a problem.

"We've got to decide how we can limit it (growth)," he said. "Who am I to say a student can't go here?"

He would not want to screen people entirely by grades, he said.

"I'd hate to see us become an egg-head school where they just get the ivory tower people," he said.

Male yell leaders is one tradition Reynolds doesn't want to see broken. Yell leaders in white is one of the things that makes A&M distinctive, he said.

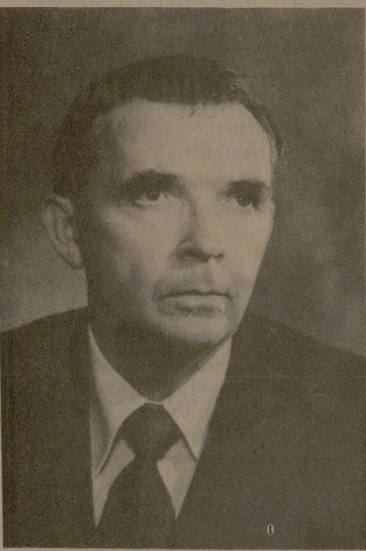

"I don't want to be another University of Texas," he said. "One of those is enough."

When the interview turned to construction on campus, Reynolds said the MSC is "a work of art" and criticism of it reflects lack of appreciation.

His only comment on the blue water tower was "it's different."

Reynolds, a former Marine, is a partner in the law firm of Reynolds, White, Allen, and Cook which formed in 1966. He began practicing law in 1949.

Around town Plates on sale

The 1975 license plates are now on sale at the county tax-assessor-collector's office in the Brazos County Courthouse at 26th and Texas Avenue in Bryan.

The plates must be displayed on vehicles by April 1.

This year the state will begin using plates for five years instead of requiring new ones annually.

Play tonight

A Gore Vidal play, "A Visit to a Small Planet," will be performed by the Stage Center beginning tonight at 8.

The Stage Center Theater is on College Avenue at the Municipal Golf Course. The play will run Friday and Saturday nights and resumes Feb. 25-28 and March 1.

The play is centered around a space man's visit to Earth and his reception from an American family.

Tickets are $2.50 for adults, $1.50 for students and $1 for children 12-years-old and younger.
