

CS City Council answers public's zoning requests

March of dimes parade brought up by citizen at C.S. city council meeting.

It was a long night at Monday's College Station City Council meeting for a large group of political science class students watching city government in action.

The three-hour, 45-minute meeting was spent mostly on public hearings on zoning requests.

The council passed an ordinance rezoning a three-acre tract northeast of the abandoned I&GN Railroad right-of-way between FM 2347 and Luther Street. James Jett, of Jett Schultz Realtors in College Station, said he plans to build apartments on the tract later.

Councilmen Jim Dozier and Jim Gardner voted against the ordinance. Dozier charged that the city is engaging in discriminatory zoning practices and the hearings are tying up too much of the council's time.

"If we would zone large areas with specific restrictions then we wouldn't have all of these people asking the council for rezoning requests," Dozier said. "We should only zone property when developers have specific plans for its use."

Don Martell, president of Anderson Ridge Corporation, withdrew his request for rezoning a .643 acre tract located in the Scandia Apartments complex. Martell told the council he had originally planned to build a public night club on the land. Several persons from the surrounding neighborhood protested the plans saying it would create traffic congestion on Holleman Drive. Martell's rezoning request was denied approval from the College Station Planning and Zoning Commission Feb. 17.

Martell said he would go back before the commission and request a specific-use building permit to operate a private club in the apartment complex.

Nelson Durst, a local certified public accountant, presented an audit of the city's general fund. He told the council the city must collect $68,678 in overdue paving assessments. The council voted to hire an attorney to help collect the money which has been due over a five-year period from 1968-73.

The council also got a preview of the city's work with the Community Development Program, which will aid low-income neighborhoods with federal funds. A public hearing concerning the spending of this year's $71,000 grant will be held Thursday at 7 p.m. at the A&M Consolidated Middle School cafeteria.

The council voted to allow the Texas Utility Advisory Council to represent the city in the Lone Star Gas Company rate increase hearing March 3 before the Texas Railroad Commission. The advisory council is an arm of the Texas Municipal League.

Pan American Week planned

Pan American Week, involving students from Latin American nations as well as interested student and community groups, is planned for April 7-13.

A formal dance April 12 will highlight the week. Those countries desiring to participate in sports events should submit a list of the participants and their sports to the Foreign Students Advisors Office or to the officials of the Pan American Student Associations. Deadline for these lists is March 10, 1975. All students are invited to participate in Latin American Week. Interested persons can contact the officers of the Pan American Student Organization.

'The Crucible' to be staged

"The Crucible," Arthur C. Miller's play dealing with the Salem witchcraft trials will be staged by Aggie Players Feb. 26-29 and March 1, 6-8. Miller's play is a sardonic picture of the grisly chapter in American history when a mass hysteria swept an entire town into condemning to death 19 people convicted of witchcraft on the testimony of malicious and irresponsible witnesses.

The chief characters, John and Elizabeth Proctor, among the innocents condemned, will be portrayed by Walt Meissner and Anel Douphrate.

Red China program slated

TAMU Geographical Society presents Dr. George Knox who will present "A Scientist's Impressions of Red China" Feb. 26 at 7:30 in rm. 105 of the Geology Building.

His lecture will mainly discuss culture and research in the biological sciences in China.

Wednesday biking

Each Wednesday the A&M Wheelmen Bicycle Club sponsors an evening bike ride.

The rides are social-recreational events and are open to all cycle enthusiasts, club members or not. No time limit or distance is set for the rides, but they usually end by dark.

This week's ride is scheduled for 5 p.m. by the Rudder Center Fountain.
