into all of the choices offered her. It is an established fact that all students and former students of Texas A&M are bound together by a mysterious love called the "Spirit of Aggieland." These bonds are closer than any that could be established by way of social sororities and fraternities, and it is my sincere wish that all of those involved with these organizations will realize this fact and quit wasting their time and ours.

Intelligent letter

Editor:

In reading Eliot Lowe's letter (Letter battle begins, March 6), I could not help but detect a certain twisted view of justice. Lowe says that had the yell-leader issue reached state courts, this "in itself would not be distasteful; however . . . extensive coverage by the press and the delay of the court in handling cases . . . would probably taint the reputation of A&M"

If being in court is not the thing that is distasteful, Mr. Lowe, what is? What "would probably taint the reputation of A&M"? Surely not the extensive press coverage of our time-honored traditions! You seem to revel in having "sneaked done by the Feds." Somehow I picture you in Steve Eberhard's office kissing his senior ring and whispering, "Thank you, Godfather."

TAMU is a university without equals. Its students are an assemblage of myriad social backgrounds and nationalities. At A&M, everyone from "kickers" to "camel jocks," and yes, even girls, can learn, not only from books, but from each other. A&M is growing. We must grow with her. If something is good, keep it. If it is not, dispose of it without mercy. Why do you worry so about the yell leaders' X and Y chromosomes? If you truly loved A&M, you would not doubt her inimitability. You make an excuse of tradition, Mr. Lowe. When you proclaim, "I'm Old Ag," it is as if you say, "Don't talk to me; I'm deaf. I'm retarded. I will not understand you."

It is not your opinions that enrage me. It is those fingers you keep stuffed in your ears.

Poor coverage

Editor:

This letter is in reference to the coverage (or rather, the LACK thereof) of the SWC Championship won by the Aggie basketball team. It is not everyday a team wins a championship, and when the title is brought home by the Aggies, it seems as they are entitled to much more coverage than they received. Not only did the championship get slighted, but so did the beating of the University of Texas. Both of these wins were big stories, yet received little coverage.

It seems as though the Number 1 team in the conference has been ignored nationally for some reason by both AP and UPI, but when the home newspaper manages to do the same thing, something is wrong somewhere!

Anyway, congratulations to Coach Shelby Metcalf and to our team for a job well done!

Bad letter

Editor:

As a fish at A&M I have learned to love the traditions which make Texas A&M a unique and superb school. These traditions and this uniqueness cause the school to be known nation wide.

I live on the fourth floor of Byrd E. White in the military quad. Because of this I have almost as much exposure to "Old Army" tradition as a member of the Corp of Cadets. This exposure has taught me at least one tradition which you, the editor (Moses) obviously have not learned. That is that there is not a school which has the capital letters T. U., or U. T., but there is a small school which has the little letters t. u.

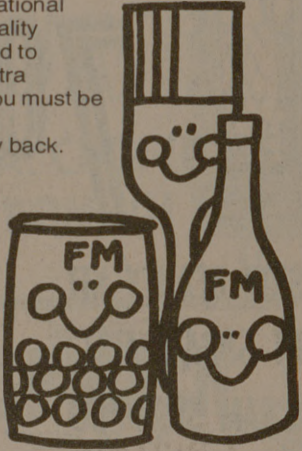

In several instances I have seen this neuseating first case published. I realize that it may be contained in a letter written to you in this way, but if the writers of the letter have enough knowledge to write an intelligent letter about A&M then they should know better. If they don't, heaven help them, then they may never learn unless you correct that slip of the pen.
