

'Aggie traditions carry obligations'

Dallas banker and businessman James W. Aston told the Saturday contingent of spring graduates that the "Spirit of Aggieland" will put them in good stead for the inevitable changes facing them.

Aston told the Class of '75 that Aggie tradition carries with it an obligation to return to the people of Texas a dividend of service greater than received.

"We live in a world of constant change, and if we are to pass on to the future generations a better world, we can never cease our quest for knowledge and our adaptability to change," he reminded the graduates.

TAMU divided its commencement into dual exercises this year to accommodate the large number of graduates (2074), the first time in its 99-year history the total exceeded 2,000. Nearly 30 percent of the 1,690 recipients of baccalaureate degrees were awarded with "honors" designation, meaning the recipients achieved grade point ratios of at least 3.25 out of a possible 4.0.

Aston assured the graduates they are off to a good start. "You have been privileged to have the opportunity to obtain an education equal to the best in the world," he said. "May I give you a gentle reminder, however, that the real test will be how well you absorb and assimilate future opportunities and how well you meet the challenges of life awaiting you."

"That which is worthwhile is rarely easy," he observed. "Life is filled with opportunities; it is also filled with perils along the way. Always, in the final analysis, we must ask ourselves the old question: 'Did you bring in the ship?'"

Military commissions were awarded to 130 of the graduates, with all four branches of the armed forces gaining new officers, including Collette Boyd of Denison, who entered the Army and was the first woman to pin on gold bars at such ceremonies.

Marine Corps Lt. Gen. Samuel Jaskilka served as commissioning officer as well as being the honored guest at the Corps of Cadets' Final Review.

General Jaskilka, the Marine Corps' deputy chief of staff for manpower, made himself an immediate hit by saying his "estimate of the situation was that TAMU had the best corps of cadets in the world."

"What an advantage it is," he said, "for a young man entering the service to have the benefit of a background from Texas A&M."

He admonished the new officers to get ready to assume tomorrow's leadership of the armed forces.

"I say to be a good leader, you need to do three things," he emphasized. "You must set a good example. You must know your 'stuff.' You must communicate."

"Keep working on those traits," the general added. "You can never take your pack off."
