I'm not the Quarterback

Aggie fans hard to please?

By DAVID WALKER
 Southwest Conference Football, like that other favorite American institution Christmas, begins sneaking upon us earlier every year. This year is no different. Since the football bible, Texas Football, hit the stands last week I have heard pairings for the Aggies to play every major college football team in America in every bowl.

Everyone has their own idea of what the Aggies are going to do so I decided to bring up the subject Saturday night at that SWC football hot spot, the Dixie Chicken. The general feeling was that the Aggies were going to win the world. I heard everything from, "Yea, we're gonna win the whole thing," to "Well, they gotta beat Texas to win it and you know they can't beat Texas." If you want to hit a sore spot with me just start talking about choking and not being able to beat Texas. By the time we left the Chicken, Sports Editor Mike Bruton and I were ready to take on the Longhorn 11 ourselves. It seems that to some people that good old Aggie spirit means Texas or nothing. I really think that some people would rather the Ags go 1-10, as long as the victory was over the Longhorns, than to go 10-1. Those are the same ones that still gripe about last year's football season. You remember, the 8-3 team, the best record in 17 years. There are a lot of reasons for this feeling, the major one being that the Ags have such a miserable all-time record against the Horns, (18-58-5). The other big reason is the mous, "wait till next year." Last year the Aggies had solid reasons to say this because they had so many people returning for this season. The big fault was this is that it was used by die-hard Aggies so much in the late 60's and early 70's when the Aggie really didn't have anything to say till next year for, thus making saying old, no good and just another Aggie joke.

Now comes this year. The Aggies do play Texas and there are some Aggie football fans (?) who will come out of hibernation only for that game. Poor souls, they don't know what they will have missed. Think that the team, like themselves, only wants to beat Texas. I've got some ideas about the thoughts but they could never be printed.

Granted there is more pressure on the team on Thanksgiving than other days but, like it or not, it's just another game. (Even I am guilty, I won't believe I said that November 27.)

The upcoming football schedule for the Aggies is very interesting, especially the home schedule. The home the Ags play non-conference games with Mississippi and Illinois before hosting three conference teams: Last year's conference champion, Baylor, the team that kept the Aggies out of the Cotton Bowl, SMU and then the game that no one knows about, Texas.

With a lineup like that they can afford to look forward to Texas even if they wanted to.

Namath's meeting a mystery

Joe Namath called a press conference Tuesday in a New York restaurant that left all the reporters only a hint as to his professional football career and his future.

"I think what Joe has to say will shake 'em up a little bit," said a friend of Namath's. Namath's attorney, Jimmy Walsh, gave other clues to the mystery. Walsh said Namath's speech directly involves his career but indirectly concerns the New York Jets. And the Jets were more shocked by the conference than anyone, because they weren't asked to participate.

Speculation was stirred when Namath left camp temporarily without an explanation of purpose. The Jets have offered the star quarterback a million-dollar contract to continue his star-studded career with them, but he has made no effort to sign. Since Namath refused a $4 million dollar pact from the World Football League in May, it is obvious that he has some alternative in mind. Many believe that he wants to stay with the Jets, but for more money. Not necessarily.

Namath has admitted on occasions that he would very much like to get into the movie-making business. He has made appearances in three movies, the biggest being "C.C. & Co." with Ann Margret. Everything still remains a speculation, as Namath is yet to state his full intentions.
