Benson to tour pipeline

Fred J. Benson, TAMU Dean of Engineering, announced last Thursday that he would tour the Alaska Pipeline. He made his announcement at a luncheon sponsored by the Bryan-

College Station Chamber of Commerce.

Benson said he would make the tour of the pipeline with members of the H. B. Zachry Construction Company who are working on the 240-mile stretch immediately south of Prudhoe Bay.

"We're going to look at the problems they've got and see if there are any ideas for research that TAMU could do," Benson said. "We want to see first hand the difficulties they're facing and decide what we can do to solve them."

Driscoll is chosen for meteorology panel

The World Meteorological Organization (WMO) of the United Nations has named a TAMU professor as a member of the Working Group on Human Biometeorology.

Dr. Dennis M. Driscoll of the TAMU Meteorology Department has been named to the group along with scientists from Senegal, France, and the Federal Republic of Germany.

They will study the application of the effects of climatic changes on human activity as well as the possible effects of man on climate. The group will also study the effects of solar radiation on man and atmospheric effects on the spread of disease.

"The task of the research will also investigate the impact of climate and specific weather conditions on the seasonality of diseases," Driscoll said. "We will delve into determining the best climatic conditions for human well-being."

"The WMO acts rather like an umbrella organization or a clearing house for meteorological information," he said. "And we provide some information on the influence of weather and climate on the physiological and psychological effects on humans."

"The area we are looking at is where the physical environment meets medicine and interacts," Driscoll said. "For instance, one of the major threats in this area is air pollution which has diverse effects on morbidity and mortality among humans and animals."

York named top journalism grad

Exa Ellis York of Bryan has been named by the Society of Professional Journalists, Sigma Delta Chi, as the outstanding journalism graduate this year at TAMU.

Mrs. York, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gus Alvin Ellis of 114 Greenway Drive, received her B.A. degree in May.

In conjunction with her TAMU studies, Mrs. York worked part-time as an editorial assistant in the Center for Marine Resources. She served last summer as a Newspaper Fund editorial-intern at the Arkansas Gazette. Only two other TAMU journalism students have been selected for such internships.

Mrs. York is moving this week to Louisiana where her husband is joining an oil firm.

Recipients of the Sigma Delta Chi citations are chosen on the basis of character, scholarship in all college work and competence to perform journalistic tasks. The announcement said the purpose of the citations is to foster high standards and encourage broad and thorough preparation by students intending to follow a journalism career.

If you'd like a new car but don't have the cash...

then you might consider a new car loan from BB&L.

BB&L has been making car loans for years. On every model and make of car. For savings customers, mortgage customers and families who have yet to have any other business relationship with the Brazos Valley's largest financial institutions.

Rates and terms for automobile loans at BB&L are competitive. Payments are tailored to fit tight budgets and a minimum of paperwork is required.

Talk to any officer in the Installment Department about a new car loan.

You could drive a new car home tomorrow.
