Ed Dibbs beats Ashe

Eddie Dibbs, an unheralded 24-year-old with a ferocious two-fisted backhand, turned in the biggest upset of the 1975 U.S. Open Tennis Tournament, eliminating Wimbledon champion Arthur Ashe in straight sets 6-4, 6-2, 6-3 Monday.

Dibbs, in his element on the newly installed clay courts at the West Side Tennis Club, at Forest Hills, N.Y., fired away from the baseline and kept the fourth-seeded Ashe off balance throughout the match. By the time Ashe stopped trying to match ground strokes with the chunky Dibbs and tried to come to net in the third set, it was too late.

Dibbs' stunning triumph lifted him into the quarter-finals of this tournament for the first time. Last year Dibbs, from Miami Beach, Fla., didn't even play in the Open, preferring to bypass any event held on grass.

While the result came as a shock to the crowd at the stadium's center court, Ashe, whose vaunted service lost its sting on the soft clay courts, was not surprised.

"I said my chances weren't as good on this surface," he said. "I thought if I could manage to get to the net, I could make him nervous. But he played passing shots for all three sets, which is unusual."

Dibbs agreed.

Dibbs' opponent in the quarter-finals will be Bjorn Borg, the 19-year-old Swedish star who outlasted Australian Rod Laver. Borg and Laver put on the best match of the afternoon, a 2 hour, 10 minute affair that featured lengthy rallies on the slow clay surface.

The youthful Borg proved too much for Laver who, at 37, has lost the fine edge that made him the world's top player and brought him an unprecedented two Grand Slams during the 60s, winning 6-1, 6-4, 2-6, 6-2.

Walter Johnson and Rube Waddell. The only hits Seaver allowed were singles by Willie Stargell in the fourth inning, Manny Sanguillen in the fifth, Ed Kirkpatrick in the sixth and Dave Parker in the seventh.

Rookie sensation Mike Vail gave Seaver the only run he needed when he homered in the first inning off loser John Candelaria, 7-5. It was the first at-bat in Shea Stadium for Vail, who was brought up from the minors on the Mets' recent road trip.

Cowboys cut squad

The Dallas Cowboys cut five players Monday to bring their squad to 53 members, meaning one more player will have to be released by this week, a Cowboy spokesman said in Dallas.

Those released were running back Billy Ray Nash of Claremont, defensive end Mel Hinton of Westchester State, wide receiver Lee McGriff of Florida, guard Jim Boyle of Montana State and defensive back David Shaw from Prairie View A&M.

The Cowboys listed seven players as "questionable" for play Friday night against the Oakland Raiders in Dallas.

The players and their injuries are Percy Howard, hamstring; Lee Roy Jordan, knee; Ken Hutcherson, knee; Danny Kepley; Scott Laidlaw, knee; Rodney Wallace, hip; and Mark Washington, finger.

Listed as "probable" for the game are Robert Newhouse, strained neck nerve; Dave Edwards, hamstring; D.D. Lewis, toe; Drew Pearson, groin; and Mel Renfro, groin.

Seaver in 20th win

Tom Seaver hurred a four-hitter for his 20th victory and became the first pitcher in major league history to strike out 200 or more batters in eight consecutive seasons in leading the New York Mets to a 3-0 home victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates Monday.

The 30-year-old right-hander fanned 10 Pirates, boosting his season total to 204 and breaking a three-way tie with Hall of Famers
